I "GREW UP" IN A FOXHOLE

I didn't think it was going to be like this the day we all marched down to the station. The band was playing and Mom and Dad and Dot were waving goodbye. And even though there were tears in Mom's eyes, I felt great.

I remember Bob Allen slapped me on the back and said, "You'll be a hero, chum." And we waved some more and the train pulled out.

I didn't know what I was fighting for then . . . but I know now.

I'm not kidding myself.

I'm not fighting for glory or medals or big parades with ticker tape and paper coming down like a snow-storm.

I'm not fighting to cram my religion or my ideas down somebody else's throat.

I'm not trying to create a new world order or a dream state.

Out here you catch on quick. In a foxhole you strip things down . . .

And what I'm fighting for is home!

For the right to come home again to the town, the folks, the girl, the job I had before I went to war. Home to America where freedom of speech means a man can grouse or praise as he sees fit . . . where freedom of worship and freedom from fear aren't just talk but are taken for granted. America, where I can live like my folks lived . . . where our way of living has always brought us new and better things . . . and where there's freedom of opportunity for every man to plan and build and grow to the top of his ability!

That's home . . . that's America to me.

Keep it that way until I come back.

Here at Nash-Kelvinator, we're building giant 2,000 horsepower engines for the Navy's Vought Corsair fighters . . . propellers for United Nations' bombers . . . working to hurry the day when our boys will come home and we can turn again to peaceful things, to the building of an even finer Kelvinator, an even greater Nash!

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

LITERARY ENGLAND

Sirs:

As a future Naval flier (I hope!) and a recent college student I wish to thank you for epitomizing and clarifying in my mind the greatest things about which I have studied and for which I will fight. I refer, of course, to your photographic essay, "Literary England" (LIFE, June 14).

England is America's cultural homeland—to it anyone imbued with our heritage must turn. We must fight not only for the preservation of America but for the preservation of Britain—so bound up with our history, so inspiring in the past, the present and for the future. Anyone bred in the democratic faith finds it hard to believe that the Germans who love their Rhine are very different from the British who love their moors and castles or the Americans endeared to their skyscrapers and rolling plains. The troublemakers and the fanatics are a minority. By the faith of all peoples, by their true heritage of history, this group must and will be beaten.

J. A. MASON JR.

Sirs:

I would like to express a soldier's appreciation for "Literary England."

GRADUATION

Sirs:

Graduation exercises at the Forest (Ohio) High School as reported by you (LIFE, June 14) proceeded pretty much according to tradition. Here at San Jose, only six out of a class of 47 boys were on hand to receive their diplomas. Absent were 32 boys, now in uniform, three employed in war jobs and five who had been killed in action. The latter group included one R. A. F. and two U. S. Army Air Forces pilots and two U. S. Navy enlisted men. Exercises were dedicated to their memory.

In the absence of their sons, diplomas were awarded to the mothers and fathers. Picture herewith shows Mrs. W. A. Oliver, mother of Drexell William, just after she had received his diploma.

Sirs:

"With all the solemnity and dignity befitting his five years, little Joe Twerp, magnificently attired in cap and gown, marched down the kindergarten aisle to receive his sheepskin, summa cum laude, certifying his entrance into grade school."

LIFE's June 14 cover publicizes the inane use of cap and gown for high school. Eventually we'll come to the touching scene I have just described. Let us not contribute to the misuse of a custom, signifying achievement above and beyond that attained by high-school graduation. Thank goodness my children have attended Woodrow Wilson High, where there is no nonsense such as caps and gowns nor any "professors" on the faculty.

CARNIVOROUS PLANTS

Sirs:

In your article, "Carnivorous Plants" (LIFE, June 14), you have committed a familiar offense against the principles of scientific thought. In the manner of the nursery tale, you endow the plants with intelligence, craft and volition, as if they were human, saying that they lure their prey, in order to make up for a nitrogen and protein deficiency.

Actually, the plants do not lure the insects into their leaves, but the insects get involved in the leaves by reason of their own nervous system or behavior patterns. The insect is unable to escape because of a sticky substance covering the epidermal cells of the leaf. The insect may either be crushed or die from starvation. Enzymes act upon the insect and produce new nitrates and protein compounds, which diffuse into the cells of the leaf. Thus, scientifically, it is a very impersonal affair, by which, through a combination of insect behavior patterns, plant behavior patterns and the action of enzymes, the nitrogen-protein deficiency is made up in carnivorous plants.

Sirs:

Re the common pitcher plant: you say that its "digestive juices turn the insect into a broth, which the plant absorbs." This is at variance with a statement from Wild Flowers of New York, Vol. I, page 123: "The pitcher-shaped leaves usually contain water in which are drowned insects which furnish food for larvae of a fly, instrumental in the cross-pollination of the flowers." This sounds more plausible, if less romantic.

FLORICE G. TERRY

Hermon, N. Y.

● Though a strict scientific statement of its nutritional process leaves very little room for romance, the pitcher plant nonetheless absorbs nourishment from drowned insects. Equally well established scientifically is the function of the insect broth in promoting cross-pollination.—ED.

May I express warm appreciation to all LIFE readers who called or wrote me about deburring cylinder gasket rings for Packard-built aircraft engines (LIFE, May 31). Since then, more than 800 suggestions reached me here at Packard not counting the 912 to date received by LIFE.

Just as that issue appeared, our factory processing department had found the answer. They took the rings I was trying to deburr by hand and put them in a "tumbling barrel." This is a sealed metal cask partially filled with a mixture of small granite chips, water and a

TOO MANY COOKS

Sirs:

LIFE's editors may lower their skeptically raised eyebrows, on the verity of Commander Hohaus' account of the self-cooked flying fish which alighted, via the porthole, on the griddle in the ship's galley, and flipped himself over on his back when he was done to a turn in front (Letters to the Editors, LIFE, June 14).

I can vouch for every word he says because I was the cook in the galley at the time this event occurred.

Where does Hanson W. Baldwin get the idea of the soft seats occupied by soldiers of World War I (LIFE, June 14)? Baldwin says, "Unlike the days of World War I there is little rest or relief." Our company of the 90th Division was under fire for 75 days and nights. Was that rest?

The G-E vibration test for military radio

A tank destroyer is plenty rough on radio

One more reason why your post-war G-E electronic radio will be better than ever!

Every time a tank destroyer advances a single foot, tiny radio parts get the jouncing of a lifetime.

But nothing goes wrong! General Electric gave that radio even rougher treatment before it ever saw a tank destroyer!

Your radio, and all military radio, is an assembly of parts — many fragile and delicate. Hardly a single part can fail without the whole radio failing.

General Electric insists that radio for the armed forces undergo the most grueling tests. Parts and materials are ceaselessly inspected before the radio is assembled. After assembly, there are vibration tests that simulate the roll and toss of a tank destroyer . . . tests that reproduce the heat and humidity of steaming jungles . . . violence tests that hurt worse than a ton of bricks.

A radio has to be good, to stand that punishment!

Your own General Electric radio, after the war, will be finer because of these rigorous wartime standards. Precision methods will be used, high manufacturing standards will be adhered to. And General Electric quality will cost less than ever before!

Jap-hunting without a gun!

THE TRUE STORY OF HOW A CRIPPLED LOCKHEED LIGHTNING OUTFLEW 13 JAP ZEROS AND GOT HOME, SAFE!

1. With cameras instead of guns in its nose, a P-38 Lightning was photographing the Jap base of Rabaul. Suddenly ten Zeros dove out of the sun, and before the American pilot knew what was happening, tracer bullets were ripping into his plane and then one engine conked out.

2. Somehow, with only one engine left, he had to get away from those ten Zeros. He pulled back the stick, jammed down the throttle, pointed her nose at the sky. By the time the Japs came to, he was five miles up and on his way home.

3. 400 miles later, three more Japs started a deadly game of hide and seek. Still going on one engine, he streaked straight out over the ocean and "Just ran 'em out of gas!" Yes, he ran them out of gas...but he also ran clear back to New Guinea with photographs that were vital to our Coral Sea victory.

4. The Lightning is used as a camera plane because it can fly faster, higher, and farther than any enemy fighter — can take punishment and still deliver the goods. These qualities result from many months of designing and testing. From hundreds of wind tunnel experiments we developed the non-stall wing design that makes it impossible for a P-38 to go into a tail-spin even on one engine. It's this sort of designing that gives every Lockheed and Vega plane extra strength and extra dependability.

NATIONAL INTERESTS

Sirs:

Your editorial (LIFE, June 14) declares that Mr. Roosevelt "has failed to define what our national interest is..." You have to skip a lot of history to make that statement.

Certainly the President has said forcibly enough that we intend to obliterate totally the Axis war machine and the tions are conducive to escape of the fire into surrounding fields and woods.

The one note of caution expressed in the statement, "Fires should never be built on grass unless the grass is wet," can, paradoxically, become very dangerous advice. Of all the inflammable material in a forest, grass is the quickest to dry out and carry fire.

From the 200,000 forest fires which occur annually, this nation loses some $35,000,000 in timber and products, aside from tremendous intangible losses in scenery, recreation, wildlife and wagovernments that back it. This is the central aim in all the Allies' plans for their future "national interests."

The U. S. has been the chief backer of the Atlantic Charter and the organization of the United Nations. Thus the Administration has truly established our national interest as being "wide as the world"—to use LIFE's editorial phrase. I do not see that either Russia or England have yet made a clearer statement of their national interests.

FOREST FIRES

Sirs:

As a boy in the backwoods of Maine one of the things that we could never understand was how these city folks could build such good forest fires. Now I know who done it!

I have seen harmless-looking individuals from the city who could make a fire that would have a 50-acre woodlot burning beautifully in 15 minutes. It's an art—but a great many more people will know that art now that you have printed those close-ups of "campfires" in your article, "Outdoor Living" (LIFE, June 7).

Sirs:

I feel that I must call your attention to the danger of distributing such material to the public.

W. G. HOWARD

Director

State of New York Conservation Dept.

Sirs:

Members of the Forest Service were much interested in the article, "Outdoor Living," but most of us were shocked by the campfire photographs. In all but one of the seven shots showing campfires or setups of campfires, the conditioned values. Most of these fires are the result of thoughtlessness or lack of knowledge. The war has brought these losses into even sharper focus and Congress, recognizing the danger, appropriated an additional $5,000,000 last year to intensify forest-fire control.

Pictures herewith show the correct method for building and extinguishing a campfire. Most important source of danger is the stratum of inflammable litter which overlays the forest floor. Before the fire is built the ground should be scraped down to mineral soil for several yards around. On breaking camp the fire should be thoroughly doused with water, stirred to make sure that every ember is out and then it should be buried. The shovel and the bucket are required camping equipment in most state and national forests.

FLOODS

Sirs:

In the June 7 issue on page 21 you show a picture of farm buildings near Vincennes, Ind. half covered by the flooding waters of the Wabash. That Vincennes itself was not washed away is due almost entirely to the heroic work of the U. S. Army. Thousands of soldiers from Indiana and Kentucky worked for more than a week to prevent the inundation of our city and probable loss of many lives.

To George Field men, our neighbors in Illinois—first to arrive, last to leave—whose services were volunteered by the commanding officer, Colonel Edwin B. Bobzien, we are especially grateful. Their own field was in danger equal to that of Vincennes, yet their men remained here to work for the civilians while less than half of the staff carried on their usual duties and built levees as well.

SPEAKING OF PICTURES . . .

. . . THESE MEN RISKED THEIR NECKS FOR INDEPENDENCE

Not one of the 56 men who signed the Declaration of Independence in 1776 lived long enough to face a camera. (The last Signer, Charles Carroll, died in 1832 and the first photograph in the U. S. was taken in 1839.) But on these pages LIFE has assembled the best existing likenesses of the immortal Fifty-Six from paintings, engravings and drawings.

As these pictures indicate, most of the Signers were men of wealth and distinction. Most of them inherited large lands and money. Some of the group were "self-made" men who were as rich as those who had inherited fortunes. Only one or two were "poor."

Few Americans today can quite imagine the courage it took for 56 such men to declare their united colonies to be "free and independent States." Not only were they risking their large personal possessions, but their personal necks as well. The Signers frequently reminded each other that they could all be hanged for their act; the final words of their Declaration—"We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor"—were not idle ones. Because of this danger the Signers' names were withheld by Congress until January 1777, although the Declaration was read in public on July 8, 1776.

Ten of the Signers served in the Revolutionary Army and two (Heyward of S. C., Walton of Ga.) were wounded in action. Four of them were captured by the British—Heyward, Walton, Middleton of S. C. and Stockton of N. J. The wife of one Signer, Francis Lewis of N. Y., was taken from her home by British troops within two months after her husband had signed the Declaration, and treated so badly that she died from the effects of her captivity.

JOHN HANCOCK OF MASSACHUSETTS

John Hancock

Fifteen Signers suffered severe financial losses during the war and four (Stockton, Lewis, Braxton of Va. and Nelson of Va.) were permanently ruined. British troops went out of their way to burn the homes of Signers. An insurance study proves that the average Signer lived two years less than the average man of his time—some of them, like Joseph Hewes of N. C., who gave John Paul Jones his job in the American Navy, actually died of overwork for the Revolutionary cause. Signer Thomas Lynch Jr. of S. C. contracted a severe bilious fever while recruiting troops for Washington and went to sea for his health; his ship was never heard of again. Button Gwinnett of Ga. was the first Signer to die; he was killed in a duel with a political enemy in the spring of 1777. (His autograph, though not the rarest of the Signers', has sold as high as $51,000. Lynch's autograph, the rarest, has sold for $9,500.) Strangest death to come to any Signer was that of George Wythe of Va. He was poisoned with arsenic in coffee by a nephew who was angered because of a bequest in Wythe's will to a Negro servant. Wythe lived long enough to disinherit the nephew, who was acquitted of murder because the Virginia laws did not allow a Negro cook to testify against him.

Despite their dignified appearance and eminent place in history, the Signers were a very human lot, typical of upper-crust American life in the Colonies. One (Whipple of N. H.) was a New England slave trader; another (Hall of Ga.) was a hot-headed doctor who was thrown out of the Congregational clergy for immoral conduct. At least three (Wilson and Morris of Pa., Chase of Md.) did some war profiteering during the Revolution. A surprising number of the Signers suffered from gout, including the famous John Hancock of Mass., president of the Congress, who signed his name first and very large, he said, "so George III may read without his spectacles."

I beg your pardon . . . a what?

A cherimoya. One of the world's best tropical fruits. A few are grown now on this continent, but yours may come all the way from Peru.

Bet it won't taste like much by the time it gets to my house!

Bet it will! It'll be wrapped in PLIOFILM.

What of it? Does PLIOFILM make foods last forever?

*No, not that long. But countless university experiments with this amazing waterproof, synthetic wrapping prove that it can keep fruits and vegetables fresh and delicious two to ten times longer, because it's moistureproof . . . flavorproof . . . virtually spoilageproof. You see, it seals the juices in... seals decay out!**

Does all this just apply to tropical fruits?

Oh no. PLIOFILM does plenty for everyday foods too. Brings you superb juicy oranges and apples any month in the year. Gives you celery and lettuce and broccoli garden-crisp and fresh. Sees to it that all the precious vitamins stay in all your fruits and vegetables.

You're making me hungry!

Sorry—you can't buy your foods in PLIOFILM right now, because it's a war-worker-only for the duration. But after Victory, PLIOFILM will be on hand again to help you do the best eating of your life . . . by bringing you cheese, meat products, bakery goods, soups, nuts and many other goodies fresher, tastier than ever before.

P. S. Pliofilm is not just for foods alone. It has literally thousands of applications as low-cost protection for pharmaceuticals, chemicals, tobacco, precision instruments, cables and all moisture-sensitive products. It is widely used also for bowl covers, garment bags and lampshade covers.

*SEE WHAT PLIOFILM DOES. Both these grapefruit were kept in storage five months at 70° F., but the still-perfect specimen was wrapped in Pliofilm. The Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Florida made this test; reports: "The grapefruit wrapped in Pliofilm showed no loss of flavor and little shrinkage as compared with the unwrapped fruit... the original appearance of the fruit was unchanged... Vitamin C content very slightly diminished."

ATTENTION: COOPERATIVES AND GROWERS' ASSOCIATIONS — Prepare now to take advantage of this new miracle in fruit, vegetable and food packaging for after-the-war markets. For information write: Pliofilm Sales Dept., Goodyear, Akron, Ohio.

LIFE'S PICTURES

The first big story Hansel Mieth photographed for LIFE was on the sheep industry (LIFE, May 24, 1937). It was so good a job that Miss Mieth was made a permanent member of the LIFE staff. Today Miss Mieth owns and lives on a sheep ranch near San Francisco. A few weeks ago, following the pastoral pattern she started years back, she went to New Mexico and took the lambing pictures which are printed on pages 114-119.

CAN YOUR SCALP PASS THE "FINGERNAIL TEST?"

1. Scratch your head and see! If you find signs of dryness or loose, ugly dandruff, you need new Wildroot Cream-Oil-Formula. Grooms, relieves dryness, removes loose dandruff! Two sizes, 60¢ and $1.00.

YOUR HAIR CAN LOOK LIKE THIS WITH NEW WILDROOT CREAM-OIL

2. Keeps your hair well combed all day long, and without a trace of that greasy look! And grooming without grease means no more stained hatbands, no greasy pillow slips! Your hair looks good and feels good!

NON-ALCOHOLIC CONTAINS REFINED LANOLIN!

3. Refined LANO-LIN has long been prescribed because of its soothing qualities, and because it closely resembles the oil of the human skin. Wildroot Cream-Oil is also homogenized for uniformity. No wonder 76 of every 100 users in a nation-wide test prefer it to the preparations they had been using. Get a bottle today at your druggists.

A WIFE DOESN'T TELL HER HUSBAND EVERYTHING

COUNTLESS are the little things that a wife doesn't tell . . . for emotions sound cold when put into words. Her thrill about the new life she is bringing into the world . . . her desire to be loved, cherished . . . to be remembered on "special" occasions . . . above all, for protection for her children—these are the things she never tells. But they are very real in her mind.

Fortunately, wise husbands have a way of reading minds . . . and they have a knack of providing for the unspoken desires.

If there's a new toddler in your home, or if you're expecting one soon, isn't it worth while to remember that new responsibilities call for extra insurance?

There's a friendly Prudential agent near by who can help you to provide the protection and security that your wife is wishing for—but will almost never ask for.

THE FUTURE BELONGS TO THOSE WHO PREPARE FOR IT

Today—as ever since the year 1875—The Prudential's business is with tomorrow—your tomorrow, and that of your family.

Today some 8,000,000 American families enjoy the feeling of confidence, the sense of security that come from Prudential Life Insurance ownership. Your Prudential representative stands ready to help you discover, with them, that "The future belongs to those who prepare for it."

KILLED IN ACTION

LIFE LISTS NAMES OF SERVICEMEN WHO GAVE THEIR LIVES FOR THEIR COUNTRY IN WAR'S FIRST 18 MONTHS, WITH NEXT-OF-KIN ADDRESSES

On the next 23 pages LIFE compiles from official Army and Navy announcements and prints by State and town the names of American soldiers, sailors and marines who gave their lives for their country during the first 18 months of war. With each name is listed the address of his next of kin—which is not always the last address of the dead man. The list includes only men killed in action with the enemy, those who died of wounds and those who died in enemy prison camps. It does not include men who died of noncombat accidents or disease, either abroad or in continental U. S. Nor does it include men who are reported missing in action.

On the list are 12,987 names. Last week Washington announced that 15,132 men had been killed in action—7,528 in the Army, 7,604 in the Navy. The difference between LIFE's list and the Army-Navy list is that the Army and Navy release casualty figures before they release the names and addresses, which are never publishable until the next of kin have been notified. In addition, a few names were received too late for inclusion on LIFE's list. Furthermore, the list may have some mistakes because it is often very difficult to identify all the dead after a battle.

As a nation, the U. S. is not accustomed to big war casualties. Not since the Civil War has its manpower been seriously weakened by battle losses. In World War I, in which it was a participant for just 19 months—almost the same length of time as covered by the lists on the following pages—it had a total of 126,000 combat dead. Its full A.E.F. casualty list, including dead, wounded, missing and prisoners, was only 364,800, approximately 8% of the men in its armed forces. This compares with 75% casualties for Russia, 73% for France, 65% for Germany, 39% for Italy and 36% for the British Empire.

As of last week, total announced U. S. casualties for World War II, including dead, wounded, missing and prisoners, were 90,860. Comparatively it is a small figure. Great Britain has lost close to 600,000 men, the Russians 5,000,000, the Germans approximately 4,000,000. But the U. S. has been in the war only a year and a half. During most of that time it has been on the defensive, fighting only when necessary, building up its strength. When the great, offensive battles come, its casualties will mount.

THE AMERICAN PURPOSE

It lives in the hearts of those who have received the telegrams from the Adjutant General

That is the list. Those are the boys who have gone over the Big Hill.

Those are the names in the telegrams flashed over the long, sagging wires—"Regret to inform you . . . your son . . . killed in action. . . ."

Along the crooked stone walls of Connecticut and over the lush valleys of Pennsylvania and down into the sultry cottonlands of Georgia:

And around the rippled lakes of Wisconsin to the cool, blue northland, and in straight lines out over the hazy Dakotas, over Kansas:

Leaping and bounding across the Rockies to the yellow deserts of Arizona, and onward, to the miraculous, green Pacific orchards, where the water pumps chug all day in the sun:

The roll call of the Adjutant General.

Maybe you haven't got this message yet, maybe you haven't heard from the Adjutant General: well, you are just lucky—you can't know what it is to have your boy go over the Big Hill:

You can't know what it is to open the door of the garage and see the car he helped you buy—or to sit on the bed in his old room and see the picture of his girl there on the dresser, and his empty shoes in the closet—or to wander down into the cellar, as if looking for him, and see the holes he drilled in the cellar stairs when he was just a kid, and you bawled him out for it. You can't know any of this.

But maybe it would be a good idea to try to imagine it. For the people who get these telegrams ask a question: and this question is one that everybody in America must answer, and this question is, WHY?

What is it that called them over the Big Hill? What is the purpose?

When you talk about purpose, though, you have to make a distinction. It doesn't make any sense to mix up the purposes of the dead with the purposes of the living. The boys didn't go over the Big Hill in a philosophical mood. They didn't say, This or that is at stake, so now I am going to die for it. That isn't the way it happens at all.

It happens unexpectedly, when he is doing something he learned at Fort Benning, and learned all over again on maneuvers in Alabama, over and over and over; and he is swearing at the machine gun, which has jammed, or at the heat, or at the cold, and he wants to tear the guts out of that damned bastard in the pillbox across the gully—and then it happens, suddenly, so that even if he gave a hoot in hell about the purpose he wouldn't have time to think about it, let alone say what it is.

And if there was even an instant when he had a chance to think, his thoughts would have been so simple that we could never understand them, let alone write them down:

For in that instant he would see his home, and he would see Mom bending over the stove and hear the kid brother in the yard; he would see his whole town and the movie theater and the baseball diamond and the cars, and hear the voices of the girls, and remember the first girl he kissed, and even more the last one; he would all in an instant relive that life and know that it was a good life, and if they wanted to call that life "freedom," that would be Okay with him:

But it doesn't matter what he himself would call that life, or how he would define the purpose, because he is not a part of it any more, it goes on without him, and whatever he was in that community is lost, except the monument with his name on it, and the memory of him and what people do in the name of his memory.

And yet this is not true of us who are living. We still have the town and the movie theater and the baseball diamond, and we have his memory. So it matters a great deal what we say the purpose is, it makes all the difference in the world: indeed, it is for us to decide whether he died for the fulfilment of a purpose, like the boys of the American Revolution, or whether he died for the fulfilment of practically nothing, like the boys of World War I. The dead boys will become what we make them.

So we who are living must know our purpose and pursue it.

And the chief fact that we must face in pursuing it is that the U. S. has always been different from other countries. And the chief decision we have to make is whether we intend to maintain this difference, or to abolish it.

The U. S. differs from other countries because it was founded for the purpose of achieving a particular and definite goal in the evolution of man. For until the U. S. was established men found their highest purposes in the Church, in the arts, in institutions of various kinds, and they expected their nations to support these purposes, but they never conceived of a nation having such a special purpose of its own:

This was the new and unique idea introduced by the U. S. into the family of nations—a purpose stated in the very beginning, and stated over and over again by the leaders of our people:

And this purpose for which our nation was founded, and in which our nation has persisted, is TO MAKE MEN FREE:

Yes, that is what the Declaration of Independence says, that is what they signed 167 years ago, that all men are created free and equal—not just our own people, but all people:

And that is what Thomas Jefferson said—"Nor are we acting for ourselves alone, but for the whole human race."

And, later, Andrew Jackson said the same thing—"Providence," he said, ". . . has chosen you as the guardians of freedom to preserve it for the benefit of the human race."

And, still later, Abraham Lincoln called the cause of freedom in the U. S. "the last best hope of earth"; and when Mr. Lincoln spoke about the boys who died at Gettysburg he summed up the destiny of the U. S. in words that every American knows almost by heart: "It is for us, the living," he said, ". . . to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Yes, this is the dream we have always had, that in founding the United States of America we were summoning all the people of the earth into the green pastures of liberty.

And only in the last 25 years, only since the World War, have we abandoned this dream; only in our generation have we said, To hell with this purpose. Even the boys who are listed here might have said that. We taught them to.

And we must decide now whether that is the course to follow; whether to abandon the dream and try to be like other nations,

Or to rekindle within ourselves the great purpose of liberty, the great light that shone behind the Big Hill for all the American boys who have gone over it except these particular boys of ours.

And surely our only answer can be, Rekindle the light! For otherwise we shall be sending them over the Big Hill into darkness.

For there is such a thing as freedom in the world, and there is such a thing as slavery: and to abandon now the American dream is to say that we don't care whether we are surrounded by slavery, or not;

But our inescapable purpose is to strengthen freedom: to strengthen it first at home, where the boys see it so clearly—and to push it also outward, to other nations, farther and always farther, around the smoking and tumultuous earth.

This is the answer to the question that is raised by the people who get these telegrams from the Adjutant General.

And these people know this answer, they know what Lincoln meant, they know what our purpose is, they cannot doubt it:

For these telegrams aren't really written on paper at all, but on the hearts of the people who get them;

They are written on the hearts of the mothers and fathers, the sisters, the brothers, the wives, the sweethearts—the lonely people—of the U. S.:

And when these people open the telegrams it becomes perfectly clear, in an instant, that the Adjutant General doesn't really send them any way—that he only signs them:

That God sends them, about His own boys, for His own reasons, and will continue to send them and will give us no respite and no rest until we have discovered His reasons and done a job for the reasons we have discovered.

The great light of America is rekindled in the breasts of those who have clutched these telegrams in their fists in that terrible moment when they come.

BRICKER ADDRESSES GOVERNORS IN STATE BUILDING AT COLUMBUS. WIVES ARE SITTING IN BACK. MURAL ON REAR WALL DEPICTS SETTLEMENT OF MARIETTA, OHIO, IN 1788

GOVERNORS' CONFERENCE

Delegates cagey on 1944 hopes

In 1908 President Theodore Roosevelt called the first Governors' conference in Washington to consider protection of national resources. In Columbus last week, 42 state executives attended the 35th annual Governors' conference as guests of Ohio's John W. Bricker. Although strictly nonpolitical in purpose, the gathering provided 1944 aspirants with a nationally spotlighted forum from which to exhibit their oratory and intellectual repertoire. Some recalled that Franklin D. Roosevelt played host to his fellow Governors in Albany just one year before his victory in 1932.

As it turned out, Republican hopefuls on whom interest chiefly centered gave a rather mystifying performance. New York's Dewey took a swipe at Midwestern farmers, without whose votes he could not possibly win a national contest, by attacking them for feeding corn to hogs at expense of Eastern dairy cattle. Bricker cagily confined himself to handshaking until the final day when he produced a statement—surprising to those who thought him an isolationist—urging U. S. participation in a peace-preserving association of nations after the war. No one else said anything of campaign import.

Of all delegates, Dewey evoked most interest. Crowds waited to cheer him as he came and went. One reporter asked a group of state employes who had applauded Dewey: "Aren't you supposed to be for Bricker?" "We like Bricker," a woman replied, "but Dewey's got S. A." Another one explained: "He's got such a dramatic face."

COOKED TO ORDER IN THE U.S.A.

SERVED ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE WORLD

PLENTY OF FOOD—and the best of it—for our men who are fighting the war!

Even in parts of the world where native food is desperately scarce—even when off in the field, miles from army kitchens, our men in the Service can have a hearty meal, cooked the good American way.

Army field rations in cans, made of fine meats and vegetables, flow by the millions to the world battle fronts from many of the Nation's experienced packers of canned foods.

They have been developed by Army Quartermaster experts with the cooperation of the food canners—to help make America's Armed Forces the best-fed army in the world.

Campbell's are proud to be one of the canners whose first job is making good food for fighting men, wherever they are, however far from army kitchens. Each month, millions of cans of army field rations are being cooked and packed by America's canners.

For the home front, where also every ounce of energy is needed, Campbell's Soups are fitting more surely than ever into America's wartime mealtime scheme. Behind their rich depth of home-like flavor, people are now finding fuller nourishment than ever.

Soup, of course, is a standby food on family tables the country over. That is why so many homemakers are planning their meals with the help of Campbell's Soups, because these fine soups give the hearty kind of nourishment we all need in times like these.

Army field rations travel with our men on the fighting fronts, to assure the proper kind of food when they are far from the regular army kitchens.

On the other side of the world a flyer can have good American cooking made with good American ingredients, even when there are no army cooks nearby.

In Campbell's Tomato Soup you get the zesty flavor and the wholesome nourishment of fine tomatoes, puréed and blended with butter. This is America's favorite soup.

CAMPBELL SOUP COMPANY

I love the way my SWAN Soap suds
I love the way it feels—
It's what the doctor ordered, for
It's purer than castiles!

Hey—take a look at Mommy's skin
It's soft and smooth like mine!
Of course she uses my soap—SWAN!
SWAN suits us beauties fine!

When Daddy's latherin' up with SWAN
He gets the biggest kick!
He chuckles, "Here's a he-man soap
More suds . . . and gosh, how quick!"

When Mommy's finished bathing me
She uses SWAN for dishes!
SWAN'S good to hands—and gives rich suds
In just a few quick swishes!

Two sizes
—Large and Regular

Land sakes! Those kids have plumb forgot
To say that SWAN is thrifty!
Just snap a single cake in two
For kitchen—bath—SWAN'S nifty!

GOVERNORS SOUND OFF FOR NATIONAL AUDIENCE

Presidential hopes are unexpressed, but never out of mind. Here three of G. O. P.'s potential candidates for 1944 share a laugh: Ohio's John W. Bricker, California's Earl Warren, Massachusetts' Leverett Saltonstall.

California's Warren addresses the convention on civilian defense. Opposing release of "harmless" Japanese-Americans for relocation centers, he cried: "No one will be able to tell a saboteur from any other Jap. . . . We don't want to have a second Pearl Harbor in California. . . . This isn't an appeal to race hatred."

New York's Thomas E. Dewey gets glad hand from Ohio's Bricker and Vermont's William H. Wills. Dewey stole the show from other Republican hopefuls by his outspoken address on food problems at opening session.

Dewey assails Midwest farmers for feeding corn to hogs instead of shipping it east for dairy cattle. Declaring N. Y. would face milk rationing by October, he told Midwest Governors: "I advocate immediate execution of your pigs which are robbing my state of corn." Hog-belt Governors did not like his speech.

Nevada's E. P. Carville accepts a boutonniere from flower girl. Columbus ladies served as hostesses at convention. Their chief assignment was to entertain visiting "first ladies" who came along to hear husbands' oratory.

Radio forum sponsored by Univ. of Chicago brings together (l. to r.) Ohio's Bricker, Massachusetts' Saltonstall, North Carolina's Broughton, Maryland's O'Connor and Professor Maynard Krueger of Univ. of Chicago. Governors agreed State government must take lead in restoring civilian economy after the war.

3 Ways

Bomber Plants protect workers' health...keep them well and on the job

1 Imagine serving ten thousand hungry hard-working men and women in a crowded lunch period. It takes real managing. War plants save time in dishwashing—serve workers in Dixie Cups and containers. Safe, quick health protection.

2 Colds are the cause of much costly absenteeism. Dixie and Vortex cups, provided at drinking water centers, cut down the chances of contagion, spreading of colds and other illnesses.

3 In many plants food is brought to the workers in mobile feeding stations. By using Dixies weight is cut down, service is speeded up...no pick-up and washing afterwards.

Dixie Cups, Vortex Cups, Pac-Kups — products of the Dixie Cup Company

On many fronts, on trains, in the air, in offices, war plants and public buildings, in the camps...Dixies are helping to protect the health of America's warriors, workers and civilians. The paper cup has truly become a war-time necessity.

DIXIE CUPS

ONE OF THE VITAL HEALTH DEFENSES OF AMERICA-AT-WAR

Governors (continued)

First ladies of Massachusetts & California, Mrs. L. Saltonstall and Mrs. Earl Warren, meet at conference. Both are potential future chatelaines of the White House.

First ladies of Maryland & Nebraska, Mrs. Herbert O'Connor and Mrs. Dwight Griswold. Mrs. Griswold's husband predicted "monstrous problems" would follow war.

First ladies of Delaware & Missouri, Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. Donnell. Mrs. Donnell's husband took issue with Dewey's proposal that Midwest farmers slaughter their hogs.

These little cubes So shiny and bright ...Turn into drinks of sheer delight!

These little cubes are iced Sanka Coffee...

Their aim in life is to make you a most delicious summer drink—different and better than any iced coffee you ever drank—and ready to serve whenever you feel you'd like a glass!

And—being Sanka—this iced coffee can't get on your nerves, can't keep you up nights. Sanka Coffee is 97% caffeine-free—it's all coffee, real coffee—easy on the palate and easy on the nerves.

SANKA COFFEE is always fresh! It's one of the few coffees still vacuum-packed!

BUY U. S. WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

Here's the recipe —

1.

Make SANKA COFFEE by your usual method: Sanka's new "All-Purpose" grind works swell in any coffee-maker. Use 1 rounded tablespoon of Sanka to one cup (8 oz.) of water.

2.

Pour your freshly made SANKA COFFEE into an ice-cube tray. Cool. Set in the refrigerator to freeze. A tray of these coffee cubes can be kept on hand, ready for use at any time.

3.

Now—when you want iced coffee, simply heat some milk. Don't bring it to a boil. Even if you can get it, don't use cream.

4.

Put the frozen cubes into glasses and fill the glasses with the warm (not hot) milk. You get delightful, refreshing iced coffee with a consistency similar to iced coffee served with good old-time, heavy cream.

Sanka Coffee

Sleep isn't a luxury; it's a necessity.
Drink Sanka and sleep.

Get the story from Frances...

Here's what she means when she gurgles:

"I know where mother keeps my Johnson's Baby Powder and Johnson's Baby Oil! When I get a little bigger, I'll climb up and get 'em myself!

"When mother sprinkles me with Johnson's Baby Powder, I think, this is the ticket! Cool ... and soft ... and my, it makes me smell pretty!

"Other times, mother smooths me with nice, gentle Johnson's Oil. Makes me feel so comfortable I forget to wiggle!

"Why doesn't mother leave 'em where I can reach?"

Then hear it from Frances' trained-nurse mother...

Pretty, blue-eyed Mrs. Walter Mullane, of Plainfield, N. J., is a trained nurse. She says:

"I knew I'd need both powder and oil for the baby. My hospital experience guided me in choosing Johnson's Baby Powder and Johnson's Baby Oil.

Governors (continued)

Michigan's Governor Harry F. Kelly gets a phone call at 10 a.m., June 21, telling him of Detroit race riots. He orders out State Militia and says he'll be home right away.

Saying goodbye to Governor Bricker, Kelly expresses regret that his visit has been cut short. Bricker provides him with automobile which speeds him to airport at 80 m.p.h.

An Army plane awaits Kelly at the airport outside Columbus. He climbs in and about two hours later is back in Michigan. For pictures of Detroit riots, see pages 93-102.

"SOUTH SEA ISLAND SCANDALS"

U. S. servicemen at South Pacific base present a loud, lusty musical

Far from Broadway, a loud and lusty musical show, full of bright tunes and pretty girls, was last week enjoying a highly successful run. It was the South Sea Island Scandals staged by U. S. servicemen at a South Pacific base. Its cast consisted of soldiers, sailors, marines and local Fighting French girls, only one of whom could speak English. Its audiences consisted of virtually everybody on the island.

The opening night will long be remembered. Perhaps it was just propaganda but the press was informed that nine admirals and 27 generals were present. One plan, to have admirals and generals leave their footprints in fresh cement in the lobby, was hastily abandoned when it was discovered that the only cement available solidified instantly. Conspicuously present in the fifth row was Admiral Halsey, at whom a good percentage of the jokes in the show were aimed.

These jokes, as well as most of the songs, would have done credit to a stag party. Biggest comedy hit was a scene in which two soldiers in a Guadalcanal foxhole wondered how the boys in Africa were doing. A flashback showed an American sergeant in Algiers reclining on a couch with his harem (p. 50). Just before the curtain went down, the sergeant said, "You know who's having an easy war—those damn gold-bricks in the South Pacific."

Much of the music and lyrics, as well as the script, was written by Ensign Mark Lawrence, U. S. N. R., former president of the Princeton University Triangle Club. In the program the opening song, By the South Sea Side, was credited as "Music stolen from Cole Porter, Theft and Lyrics by Mark Lawrence."

Even if you could keep baby in a safe, he would not be protected against harmful germs that are in the air everywhere. But you can help protect baby's skin against germs by using new Mennen Antiseptic Baby Powder.

Baby's normal motions as in creeping (shown by speed camera) cause constant friction of skin at many points. Greater protection against friction is provided by super-smooth Mennen Powder, pounded now to amazing new fineness by special "hammerizing" process.

WARTIME MOTHERS HAIL NEW BABY POWDER AS VITAL HEALTH AID

3 out of 4 doctors stated in survey that they prefer baby powder to be antiseptic.

WARTIME shortage of doctors and nurses puts an extra duty on every mother to keep her baby healthy. Now baby powder can help do this! No longer can mothers regard baby powder as a mere "cosmetic." New Mennen Antiseptic Baby Powder is a real health aid, keeps babies safer two ways: Being antiseptic, it helps keep baby's skin free of many rashes in which germs play a part... diaper rash, prickly heat, scalded buttocks, impetigo; every rash means discomfort for baby, is a danger signal to mother. Being smoother, Mennen Antiseptic Powder is more effective in preventing painful chafing of baby's tender skin.

Antiseptic superiority of new Mennen Baby Powder is shown in test of leading powders by U. S. Gov't method. Center of each round plate contains a different baby powder. In gray areas, germs are thriving; but in dark band around center of Mennen plate (bottom circle), germ growth has been prevented by Mennen powder.

Greater smoothness of "hammerized" Mennen Baby Powder is proved above. Photos taken thru microscope compare leading baby powders. Mennen (bottom circle) is smoother, finer, more uniform in texture, hence guards skin better against chafing. Delicate new scent keeps baby lovelier. Use Mennen Baby Powder in diapers and all over baby's body. Best for baby, also best for you. Pharmaceutical Division, The Mennen Co., Newark, N. J.

Patriotic finale, with the entire company singing and dancing to Song of the Year, by Mark Lawrence, ends first act. Two of the girls wear stars-and-stripes costumes.

"I Got a Gal" is title of this song, which was also written by Mark Lawrence. The "Gal" is a gallon of gasoline, and the five boys who sing are off to town in their jeep.

"No Mail Today" is a burlesque of the military censor. With a happy smile, Gordon H. Pfeeger, Fleet Musician/1C, U. S. M. C., cuts all the writing out of a letter.

CHRYSLER AIR RAID SIREN

MILITARY victories culminate on the field of battle. They begin at the forge, the factory, the shipyard, and on the farm.

Thus the horsepower that contributes to the efficiency of war-time manufacture, agriculture or essential construction is contributing to victory just as surely as that which motivates actual fighting units.

The Chrysler Division, Chrysler Corporation, contributes horsepower both to the fighting and to the preparations for fighting. Its industrial engines are being applied to more than a score of essential uses directly connected with the war effort.

CHRYSLER MARINE TRACTOR

Among these uses are to furnish power for airport tractors, airport gang mowers, arc welders used in many kinds of construction, generator sets for firing cannon, industrial lift trucks, emergency fire-pumpers, air raid sirens, air compressors for a variety of uses, farm tractors, farm combines, mechanical shovels and buses.

In some cases, the United States Government is specifying Chrysler Industrial engines as the power plants in equipment it orders. They are meeting the drastic requirements of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guards, O.C.D. and O.D.T.

"CAMPBELL'S" FLAG, WHIPPED TO SHREDS BY ATLANTIC GALES, FLIES AT MAST. SHE USED THREE FLAGS ON THE TRIP

THE CRUISE OF THE "CAMPBELL"

SHE FIGHTS IN THE ATLANTIC

Few ships have seen more continuous service since the war's start than the big, 327-ft. cutters of the U. S. Coast Guard. In the storm-swept waters of the North Atlantic, they have convoyed merchantmen east and west, fighting the German submarine packs. Originally a class of seven, one, the cutter Hamilton, was torpedoed and sunk in February 1942 while on convoy duty. Since that date her sister ships have amply avenged her loss.

On one of those ships, the cutter George W. Campbell, LIFE Artist Lieut. Commander Anton Otto Fischer recently sailed on a momentous voyage. The following pages contain a photographic and artistic record of his cruise from the time the Campbell sailed on her routine convoy duties, through her desperate fight with a surfaced submarine until, dead in the water, she was towed to an Allied port.

TWO SEAMEN OF A DEPTH-CHARGE READY PARTY HUDDLE AGAINST THE DRIVING SNOW BLOWING ACROSS THE STERN

NORTHERN SEAS ARE CRUEL TO SHIPS AND MEN

One thing North Atlantic escort vessels can expect in winter is bad weather while they are at sea. Then cold sleet storms blow down from Davis Strait, from Greenland, Iceland and the frozen northern cap of the world. Hurricanes rage across the convoy routes, scattering merchantmen and lashing the seas into a mountainous fury against which ships and men must fight to keep alive.

At the worst season of the year and in seas where the foulest weather is considered to be normal, the Campbell's voyage was noted for the particularly bad weather encountered. Day after day, 100-knot winds screamed across the decks, building up gigantic waves which buffeted and pounded the small ship and making even the short trip to the bridge a dangerous adventure. In the mornings the cutter staggered under the weight of salt-water ice, all of which had to be removed to keep the top-heavy ship from capsizing.

ICE IS CHIPPED from a deck gun after storms have coated it during the night. The canvas jacket on the muzzle keeps dangerous dampness and ice from interior of the barrel.

STEAM HOSE is used by seamen to loosen depth charges that have been frozen together. Steam is needed for those places where heavy hammering is not advisable or else impossible.

THE "CAMPBELL" PUTS TO SEA to pick up her convoy. The merchantmen have sailed a few days before and will be guarded by an escort group of which the cutter is a member. Now, although on first few hours of her voyage, the Campbell is already running through heavy seas. White spray is breaking over her long, slim fo'c'sle, and the cold North Atlantic wind shrieks through her rigging and ensign. Above her, in the gathering overcast, flies a camouflaged Vega Ventura bomber on an antisubmarine search.

IN THE LATE AFTERNOON, the Campbell and her sister escorts catch up with the convoy and take their places in her protective screen. To LIFE Artist Anton Otto

Fischer, standing on the cutter's bridge, "the convoy seemed touched with a benediction of light that fell in shafts through the overcast and washed the rows of dirty freighters and tankers with bands of gold." These ships have come from many ports and carry varied cargoes. In the tankers are millions of gallons of high-test gasoline for Allied bombing

CONVOY PAPERS ARE PASSED to Campbell from ice-sheathed cutter in the background. These papers, sealed in a watertight container and hauled by line over the rough sea to cutter's gun deck, contain information about ships in the convoy—their names, cargoes and destinations. They also tell each escort what to do in a submarine attack.

THE WAKE OF THE CONVOY is littered with the wreckage of ships that have hove to and been scattered by the fury of hurricanes. The sea is still in turmoil, on its planes operating from England. The decks of the freighters are piled high with crated planes, tanks and landing barges. Below decks are foodstuffs and the munitions of war. Getting the ships and their goods safely through the submarine packs is the responsibility of the escorts. Now the Campbell and her sisters must keep constant watch for submarines. For long tense days at sea they will zigzag in the screen, their crews at lookout posts and sound gear ready to fight with depth charge and deck gun the moment an attacker is encountered.

heaving surface tosses an empty lifeboat. In the background, still lashed to a section of a steel landing barge, drift three brand-new fighter planes that will never fight the Germans.

SPEAKING TO A CORVETTE by signal light, the Campbell checks up on units of the convoy that have been scattered by storm. Signalmen on the bridgewing are bundled up against biting cold. Atlantic storms, which break up convoys, cause a great deal of extra work for escorts which must reform ranks of merchantmen and protect slower stragglers.

THE FATE OF A STRAGGLER that has fallen behind the convoy is painted by LIFE Artist Fischer. Now a wolfpack of submarines has begun to stalk the convoy and one has surfaced and begun to maneuver for the torpedo attack that will claim the first victim.

A TANKER in the convoy is hit as the wolfpack presses home the attack. The pillar of orange-colored flame rises straight up from the ship's vitals. Its awful brilliance lights up the merchantmen beyond. Escort vessels rush to their predetermined sweeping positions.

CUTTER FALLS INTO POSITION in the line that is combing areas about the convoy where attackers might be submerged. The globes of starshells above the merchantmen have been scientifically fired so they will light up any submarine running on the surface.

DEPTH CHARGES ARE FIRED from the Campbell's stern as she passes over the spot where a strong submarine contact was picked up by her instruments. A "K" gun has just fired a charge which has been primed from open fuse box (left) as thrower party looks on.

THE "CAMPBELL" MEETS HER ENEMY on the surface. A few moments before, the submarine was sighted almost within the cutter's turning circle. With her wheel at right full rudder and making full speed, the Campbell bore down on the U-boat until it was so close she could not depress her guns to continue the murderous fire raking its steel decks and conning tower. Then, for a few vindictive seconds, the cutter's starboard side crushed against the German submarine's pressure hull. Now, under the recoil force of the impact, the two vessels have drifted apart. The stricken submarine lies helpless in the blazing glare of a 24-inch searchlight, taking the full punishment of the Campbell's after guns. The white lines of 20-mm. tracer shells are cutting down the German crew and a 3-inch shell has just slammed into the submarine's plates, sending up a towering geyser of water. The U-boat is sinking and the cutter Campbell has been grievously wounded. Already her engine room is flooding and soon the searchlight will fade and die as her electric power fails.

THE "CAMPBELL'S" EPIC

In the attack depicted in these paintings, the cutter Campbell was astern of the convoy, running in wide, sweeping zigzags, when the first U-boat was picked up on the sound equipment. As she ran forward on the contact a loader at a forward gun yelled in excitement when he spotted the white wash that curled back from the hull and conning tower of a submarine on the surface and shadowing the convoy in the night. The forward guns were loaded and elevated, the searchlight was trained in the dark and everyone on the speeding cutter held his breath as they bore down on the still unsuspecting submarine. Then the blinding white beam of the 24-inch searchlight on the flying bridge cut through the blackness. At that exact instant the submarine crash-dived, leaving only turbulent, frothing seas to reflect the Campbell's light. As she passed over the U-boat's diving position, charges tumbled from the cutter's stern and were flung in high arcs from throwers to hit, sink and explode beneath the waves.

After dawn that morning, the second U-boat was contacted by sound. Though never seen on the surface, it was depth-charged heavily and then the cutter kept on its course in the stern of the convoy. Captain Hirshfield had been on the bridge for hours, was just going down the cha. room ladder to his cabin for noon chow when the third contact was made.

"I was starting to feel a little frustrated by then," reports Captain Hirshfield, "and when a lookout called 'Periscope dead ahead,' I determined to get this one for certain and ordered the helmsman to steer a collision course. He was running beneath the surface, and as we passed over him I fired a pattern of charges that must have straddled his hull. As he dived, the current from his screw threw up a large swirl of water against our port-side. We dropped a smoke buoy on the spot and came back to find an oil slick but could discover no other evidence to confirm a kill. Right after noon we had another sub contact which we depth-charged with no positive results. Just at dusk the fifth submarine was seen running on the surface. The ready gun crews opened fire at sight but as night fell we couldn't determine the results of this shelling or the subsequent depth-charge attack we made after it had crash-dived."

At dinner that evening the officers and crew of the Campbell were taut with excitement after the day of alarms. By now it was clear that the cutter was sailing through a pack of submarines and they might attack or be attacked at any moment. It was the eve of LIFE Artist Lieut. Commander Anton Otto Fischer's birthday, and in the captain's cabin beneath the bridge, Madera, the Filipino mess boy, brought in a big cake with "Happy Birthday" frosted across its top.

"I thought I'd share the cake with the fellows in the wardroom so I didn't cut it," reports Artist Fischer. "and as the Captain and I got up from the table the general alarm bell went off in our ears. I ran after him up to the bridge and there it was on the surface, our sixth submarine in 18 hours. She was crossing our bow from port to starboard a few hundred yards ahead and couldn't have seen us in the dark. We turned to starboard to ram her but as we bore down someone on the conning tower must have seen us and she turned on a course almost parallel to ours. In a few seconds we were on top of the submarine. It was an eerie sensation to look down from the bridge wing onto her deck and conning tower. A man could have dropped from the cutter's deck to hers. As we passed in that quiet second, the sub's port hydroplane ripped through our hull. Then, as she drifted astern, all hell broke loose. Our after guns opened up, their crews hollering like a bunch of Comanche Indians. Three-inch shells were slamming into the U-boat's hull at pointblank range. You just couldn't miss. And you could see the lines of our 20-mm. tracers sweeping the decks, knocking men off like tenpins. Through the darkness I could hear men calling in the water, one man shouting 'Hello, boys,' obviously the only two English words he knew. Then the calls grew fainter and finally died away."

Now the sea was pouring through the gash in the Campbell's hull and the engineer officer came up on the bridge to report that the engine room was flooding. Already the main electrical switchboard was ruined by sea water and all power had failed. The cutter lost headway and began to drift, a dark, helpless shape in the night. A strange silence fell over her crew. Aft on the starboard 3-inch gun, the Negro crew that had fired a ready box of 30 rounds into the sub sat quietly by their gun. On the bridge, Commander Hirshfield was bleeding from flying metal that had struck him in the back.

"That was a tough night," said the executive officer. "We drifted without any protection, waiting for a torpedo to hit at any moment. Then the Polish destroyer Burza came to screen us and we felt better. The next day we got a cofferdam over the gash, transferred some of the crew and supplies to the Burza and got rid of all the deck weight we could throw overboard. The Burza left us and was replaced by a corvette. Then we drifted for three days in weather that had miraculously cleared. Finally a small tug appeared and took us in tow. It had sailed 800 miles without escort to come to our aid. The skipper of that tug was the real hero of our voyage."

THE POLISH DESTROYER "BURZA" stands by the crippled Campbell to screen her from submarine attack. Cutter has lost headway after her damage and is now drifting in sea. After their successful attack, her crew is silent, realizing implications of their situation.

PART OF THE CREW IS TRANSFERRED to the Polish destroyer. Here, Lieut. Commander Fischer has painted a motor launch towing a lifeboat across to the Burza. Later food supplies were transshipped to take care of the extra men put aboard. Besides getting rid of this weight, the remaining men on the cutter threw off all removable deck fittings and placed a cofferdam over hole in its starboard side in an attempt to keep water out of ship. The Burza, low on fuel, left for port and a corvette guarded the Campbell as she drifted for three days.

THE "CAMPBELL'S" HAVEN is this bleak, ice-covered escort port. She was taken here by a small tug that sailed for 800 miles without protection to pick her up and tow her back to safety. Now she cuts a path of green water through the thin skin of ice as she is towed to an anchorage. Nestled against the gray hills in the background are a tanker, two old four-piper destroyers and an Allied submarine. Beyond them, a freighter is underway in the channel.

It is from barren harbors like this on the shores of North America and Iceland that the unrelenting submarine warfare is fought. Here lie the supply and repair ships that refit escorts after they return from their running battles at sea. From fields near these ports fly the long-range patrol planes that search for submarines and protect convoys after they have been attacked. Ashore are the rough buildings that house Allied headquarters staffs and from which go orders to the escorts who are taking the convoys across the North Atlantic. On the lonesome shores of such harbors, treeless, stony and rutted with frozen mud, the escort men relax between voyages. They drink beer in the small smoky clubs or go to movies in the little settlements. They talk of great sea battles and of friends who have died in them. Then, in a few short days, they are back on the tossing ships and out to sea to fight on the perilous convoy lanes of the Atlantic.

JUST 39 YEARS AGO

HIGGINS INDUSTRIES now moves into this new and fateful young industry unafraid and undaunted by the tasks imposed on us but deeply honored and impressed. We have no idea that we know all the answers or that we will revolutionize the industry. We do have courage and determination and we believe we have imagination.

We bring to it years of experience and knowledge acquired in designing and building boats. Because of the high tempo now required by the demands of war we hope to catch up in an art yet so young, so embryonic, that there lives today one of the two men who proved flight possible in heavier than air motor-driven machines. That man is Orville Wright, who, with his brother, Wilbur, electrified the world at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, December 17, 1903. We salute the one and honor the memory of the other.

And we dedicate the HIGGINS organization to a maximum effort to supply ships to be borne by air as we have been supplying ships and boats to be borne by sea.

COTTON can be tougher than METAL

The tail assembly of a long-range Bomber looks big enough to fly to Tokyo by itself.

These tail control surfaces—rudder and elevator—are cotton fabric, stretched over a metal frame. The part out there in the screaming wind—the part that “gets her nose up” or “sets her down” in a safe landing—has too tough a job for metal. Metal “flutters” on this job—may deteriorate through “fatigue.”

IT'S COTTON—with a college education. At the “University of Petroleum,” Shell’s research laboratories, they found how to get methyl ethyl ketone from a petroleum gas. Its high solvent power has a vital function in an airplane “dope” which tautens the fabric . . . seals it against weather . . . adds to its fire-resistance . . . smooths its “skin.”

When it gets its final coat of camouflage paint, you don’t know it’s old “King Cotton”—it looks just like the metal surfaces of the plane . . .

Practically every achievement of Shell Research now has a war application. That’s the way we want it. But these achievements are not of the kind that will be demobilized with peace. The plane in which you will some day fly away on a peacetime family vacation will probably be molded plywood—made stronger than steel by resins derived from petroleum.

Throughout your everyday life, you will enjoy seemingly “impossible” conveniences and advantages—growing from research which never pauses.

ARTIST FISCHER

AN OLD SAILOR RETURNS TO SEA

Being aboard a ship facing the gales of the North Atlantic was no novelty for Anton Otto Fischer. Born in Munich in 1882, he was orphaned as a small boy and ran away to sea when he was 16. For eight years he lived before the mast, working on ships coasting through the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, sailing through the Atlantic around Cape Horn and up the Pacific Coast. In 1906 he went to Paris with his savings of $600 and lived there for two years as an art student. Since that time he has been in this country, painting the marine canvases that have made him famous. Last year, at the request of the Coast Guard, he accepted the commission of a lieutenant commander and became an official recorder of the war at sea. As LIFE's special artist, he was aboard the Campbell during her historic engagement.

Aboard the cutter, Lieut. Commander Fischer soon became one of the crew. He sketched scenes of convoy life on the bridge and rediscovered his sea legs in weather that kept many a younger man belowdecks. His skill as a poker player in the week-end wardroom sessions soon made him as famous in the Coast Guard as had his work as an artist of the sea. But Lieut. Commander Fischer's love of the nautical is exceeded by his regard for the soil and growing things. At his home in Woodstock, N. Y. he personally cares for a large garden, planting, pruning and harvesting bumper crops. His studio is at home and there he painted the pictures reproduced on the preceding pages. The nearby mountains are an inspiration for his marine work. Says Fischer, "The rolling hills around my house remind me of the movement and structural beauty of the ocean's great green and blue waves."

ARTIST FISCHER (continued)

AT WORK IN HIS STUDIO at Woodstock, N. Y., Anton Otto Fischer finishes whaling scene. Most of his paintings are of the sea, which he grew to know as a young man. Before this trip, he kept familiar with his subject while wintering at Key West.

ANTON OTTO FISCHER AND FAMILY (his wife and daughter Katrina) chat in the sun on their back porch. They have lived in this house only a few years. Though a marine artist, he prefers to live in the country where he can go trout fishing and dig in the soil of his garden.

IN HIS GARDEN Artist Fischer is completely happy. He has the proverbial green thumb and anything he plants thrives and produces. His family gets along nicely all through the year on what they pick and Katrina cans from acre-and-a-half garden.

FISCHER FIXES BEAN POLES in his garden. This year he planted corn, potatoes, tomatoes, peas, cabbage, kale and herbs. For the first time he is experimenting with raising chickens and has a fine hog at a nearby farm in Woodstock which he is fattening up for the winter months.

The author PLAYS THE PIANO at home for his wife. She is the daughter of the late Navy, Mar Charles D. Sigsbee, who commanded the battleship Maine when it was sunk in 1898. Also an artist, Mrs. Fischer has not painted for years. As a girl she had a horror of being a "Navy wife" and thought an artist's wife as far from that as possible. Now, in her sixties, she finds herself waiting for her husband to come home from sea. Despite his age, Fischer asks no favors, shares hardships and danger at sea with younger men.

"SOLD TO THIS LADY... FOR $5000 IN WAR BONDS!"

It takes two patriots to make a sale like this. One enthusiastically lends till it hurts. The other heroically donates to the cause a prized and well-nigh irreplaceable possession—a Toastmaster toaster.

That is giving up something! For Toastmaster toast is toast at its best, timed to a T and popped up piping hot and perfect—with no watching, turning, or burning. It's all automatic—you merely set the adjustment button for your kind of toast, and press down the lever. The toaster does the rest.

Why tell you this now? Because one of these days we'll again be making America's most famous toasters—and we think we'll be making them finer than ever. . . . You could set aside just one small War Bond—and mark it "Toastmaster toaster"!

Master chefs created them. And a handsome 32-page booklet tells how to make meals more appetizing and nourishing with Toastmaster* toast—bread in its most digestible form. Write for your free copy of "Toast-Ways," to Dept. C, McGraw Electric Co., Toastmaster Products Division, Elgin, Ill.

THIS STRANGE FORM OF BROADWAY JARGON IS COLORING THE SPEECH OF OUR ARMED FORCES

by GEORGE FRAZIER

Recently at Colorado's Lowry Field, where U. S. Air Force trainees are being prepared for combat duty, a young sergeant was lecturing his class on the intricacies of a turret electrical system. Suddenly he paused and an expression of profound thought came over his face. His pupils gazed up at him, their eyes shining with eagerness for what promised to be a bit of exciting information.

"You must remember," the sergeant said, his voice husky with seriousness, "that in this circuit the generator only operates when the fornstaff is generated by the dreelsprail sparking the turfenfoil. Is that perfectly clear?" His students nodded their understanding.

Thus double talk is gradually making its way into the U. S. Army. In the single performance of The Army Play by Play before a $100,000 audience in New York two weeks ago, a sergeant was called upon to read the Articles of War to a group of recruits. The only intelligible sentence he spoke was, "The penalty is death." All the rest of his speech was pure doubletalk.

Doubletalk is one of the more bewildering phenomena which have derived from Broadway. As far back as 1917 vaudevillians who gathered at 47th Street and Broadway used to give it to the cop on the beat. It consists of a skilful blending of sense and nonsense that produces in the victim upon whom it is worked a strong suspicion that he is either hard of hearing or slowly going mad. The ability to administer it effectively requires, above all things, a talent for preserving a poker face. The doubletalker who smiles is in serious danger of betraying himself. He must also remember to employ enough legitimately applicable words to confuse his listener into feeling that he is missing something.

Any list of the masters of "the double" would certainly include the name of Sid Gary, a baritone who, with Harry Richman, has been sharing the responsibility of keeping that river away from his door. Gary, who is plump, baldish and freckled, has been mouthing

THE physical transformation of "teen-agers" is accepted with little concern by parents, but emotional changes often cause anxiety to fond mothers and fathers.

While the new forces and desires of youth should be tempered and controlled, nothing should be done to thwart dispositional changes. They merely indicate adjustment of the child to the approaching estate of maturity.

Parents should recognize, however, that proper foods are of special benefit during this final period of growth, because superior nutrition prevents some of the emotional upsets resulting from overstrain of an immature physique.

Increased Need for Energy Foods

During periods of rapid growth and development, the body requires more food energy, more dextrose than in later life. Dextrose helps always to maintain health, sustain activity, fight fatigue.

Today, available everywhere are many fine foods "rich in dextrose". Among these are cereals, fine candies, ice cream, crackers and cookies, soft drinks, canned fruits and fruit juices, table syrups, prepared desserts, jams, jellies and preserves. Even better breads are baked with dextrose sugar.

Usually you will find mention of dextrose on the labels of these foods. Look for it—it is your assurance of genuine food energy at no extra cost. And always remember, when you think of energy, think of dextrose, for dextrose is food energy in its purest form.

"Now Elmer," begged Elsie, "don't be a pig about shortages!"

"POPPYCOCK," sputtered Elmer, the bull. "I don't want a lecture, I want ice cream. I demand ice cream!"

"Sorry, Fatso," said the druggist. "I'm out of ice cream until tomorrow!"

"Shame on you, Elmer, for picking on a nice druggist at a time like this," interrupted Elsie, the Borden Cow. "The ice-cream shortage is due to the war. Uncle Sam says we can't make as much as we used to. The cream we save is going to make butter for our soldiers, and the milk goes into other dairy foods such as cheese which make good eating for our fighting forces at home and abroad."

"Huh," sniffed Elmer, "if you're such a big shot in the milk business, why don't you do something about it?"

"I'm doing all I can," smiled Elsie. "Every store that sells Borden's Ice Cream is getting delicious sherbets and ices and its fair share of what ice cream there is. I can't do any more than that. A war is a war and a milk shortage is a milk shortage."

"Milk shortage, my eye," growled Elmer. "This fellow's ice box is full of Borden's Milk. Or is he a hoarder?"

"Don't be ridiculous," chuckled Elsie. "We'll always try to have fresh fluid milk for every family—since it's so healthful that folks should drink some every day."

But, with such a lot of milk going to our armed forces and our allies, there is naturally less milk left for other dairy products."

"Hah," shouted Elmer triumphantly, "then look over here and try to explain this. These cans are all full of things made from your milk."

"Naturally," laughed Elsie. "You're looking at Borden's Prescription Specialties. They're used to feed infants and invalids. That package you have in your hoof is Borden's Biolac—a modern balanced formula that babies just thrive on. These products haven't been restricted, because they're so important to thousands of America's new babies."

"H-m-m," mused Elmer, "with all this stuff to sell, I'd say the druggist was having it easy compared to other merchants."

"Then you'd say the wrong thing as usual," giggled Elsie. "For those products are only a small part of the story. The druggist is faced with loads of shortages. There will be times when he's short of Borden's Hemo

—the new way to drink your vitamins and like 'em. And he won't always be able to get Borden's Fine Cheeses to make sandwiches for fountain lunches. It won't be his fault, of course, but some people may blame him."

"Do you call that trouble?" hooted Elmer. "Why, my second cousin Stuart who keeps a china shop tells me that..."

"For goodness sake leave your bankrupt cousin out of this and wait till I finish," went on Elsie. "That's only the start of the druggist's troubles. Help of any kind is almost impossible to get. Pharmacists, soda boys, and clerks are in the army. Girls are working in the war plants. And..."

"Stop," pleaded Elmer. "You're breaking my heart. Just tell me where this druggist keeps his white coats."

"There's one hanging up right over there," Elsie answered. "But why on earth do you ask?"

"Listen," grunted Elmer, hastily slipping into a white coat, "I may not be able to mix a prescription, but boy, can I sling a swell soda! And if times are as tough as you say, the least I can do is to give this guy a hand!"

Elsie says: Thank goodness, they aren't going to ration U. S. War Bonds and Stamps. Buy them as if your life depended on it—it does!"

doubletalk since his school days. On one occasion when his teacher asked him to explain the square of the hypotenuse of the right triangle, Gary disguised his ignorance by stating that the square of the hypotenuse of the right triangle is equal to the napid of the miffdown of the other two sides. Rather than admit her confusion, the teacher said, "Correct." From such a utilitarian start, Gary has progressed to an expertness that is practically infallible.

Back in the 1920's, Gary and Bing Crosby were both on what musicians refer to as "a transparent hamburger diet" and living at the Belvedere Hotel on West 48th Street. One afternoon they were sitting in their room when Bing said, "Call up Hymie and give him the double." Hymie was the little Jewish tailor whose shop was close to the hotel. Gary went to the phone, called Hymie and said, "This is Gary, Hymie."

"Vaht you vant?" asked Hymie.

"Hymie, you got ready that three-ply madrasca rike pleat?"

"Got vaht?"

"I said, you got that burmashawn finish, two-button with the moisenflay lining? The boy brought it."

"De boy brought vaht?" asked the bewildered Hymie.

"Look," said Gary, sounding properly exasperated, "I'm asking you if you got that triple miffdown, nice finish with the three-ply double crashenfoil?"

"Vait," said Hymie. "I look."

In black and white, Gary's words may seem, as indeed they are, completely nonsensical. But delivered skilfully, with the emphasis on the legitimate words, they have the effect of making the listener suspect that his hearing is failing. "You got that burmashawn finish, two-button with the moisenflay lining? The boy brought it" is spoken with the stress on "finish," "two-button," "lining" and "the boy brought it."

Gary, who spends a good deal of his spare time complying with friends' requests for him to give "the double" to unsuspecting victims, usually concentrates on a subject familiar to the victim. Hence, he once engaged a celebrated lawyer in a conversation by simply announcing: "I was in Chicago at the time the Loeb and Leopold case happened at the kovran on the stalet with Clarence Darrow." The lawyer begged him to go on. Not until 20 minutes later did he become aware that he was being given "the double."

A confusing question

On another occasion, Gary was passing through New York's Columbus Circle when a soap-box Socialist was holding forth. When the speaker asked if there were any questions, Gary said, "I have one."

"Go right ahead," the speaker invited.

"Well," said Gary, "it's this way. If I want to vote on the Socialist ticket and split my ticket on the kamist party from the farmoil with the Democratic Party, can I vote in Cleveland on the stanivit?"

The speaker brooded for a moment and then looked brightly at Gary and said, "Exactly."

Gary speaks in a soft, almost excessively polite voice while delivering doubletalk. His face remains deadpan and he never sneaks in more than a few "doublerooos" in a single sentence. Other practitioners work differently. For example, Jerry Colonna, a performer on Bob Hope's program, speaks loudly and utilizes "doublerooos" almost exclusively. A few years ago he was introduced as Professor Gerardo, a distinguished visiting literary critic, to a group of dreadfully serious critics who had gathered to discuss Finnegans Wake, James Joyce's celebrated excursion into the esoteric. "Here," said Colonna, "we have, unquestionably, a trax-waxed solsimate railbranks, though its saxtergreleger is fledderis glutgobbles in the dreel sprail." His audience looked at one another, nodded approvingly and turned back to Colonna for further enlightenment. A purist like Gary objects to a sentence like that on the grounds that it doesn't utilize enough legitimate words to hold the listener's attention.

Gary, who spends a lot of time in Lindy's, the Broadway restaurant for Broadwayites, is the despair of the waiters there. On his first visit he called one over and said, "Give me a steak with plamits on the side and korblit sauce fanison." Nowadays he finds it difficult to get a waiter to take a legitimate order.

Doubletalk has its obvious disadvantages. Sometimes it proves costly. One night in Lindy's, Gary was introduced to a booking agent who wanted to sign him for three weeks at the Chez Paree in Chicago at a substantial salary. Gary said, "I'll take it if I can break my jump with bruckerstoil on the flay Detroit at seven-fifty a week."

The booker said, "I'll do that."

"Do what?" asked Gary.

"Book you in Detroit first."

Gary looked at him angrily. "How about a contract leading to the fermins backsted before St. Louis?"

Gary did not get the job. Later he learned that the agent had said, "I can't book that guy. His diction stinks."

Doubletalk, like any other art form, has its variations. One of them is the fadeaway, or what Jerry Franken, an expert on the subject, calls "inhaled doubletalk." The speaker gives the double, steps backward and his voice trails off into a whisper. The effect of this is that the victim keeps leaning farther and farther forward and saying, "What?"

Uninitiates who are silly enough to wish to learn doubletalk are advised that they do so at their own risk. But once the decision has been made, the possibilities are unlimited. The best way to start is by giving a waiter an order for food. Here, for example, are some unprocurable dishes that you might slip into an otherwise sane order:

Steefils on toast
Sauteed bramishawns
Korkasauce with potatoes
Kerbits and milk
Turfenfoil coffee with a blamis sandwich
Hermilberries and cream
Taffelsnords on rye bread
Snerbs with krivit mushrooms
Zilts with sauerkraut
Tankerin zoltash imported Scotch
Kerl salad with grinks dressing
Gaugnits with sweet potatoes
Frimps without potatoes
Tursin tassins dessert with heavy cream
Zwerzwings sardines with zwafel crackers
Vimilforty cheese kribbles from Holland

The scholarly side

For all its seeming flippancy, doubletalk is not without its scholarly aspects. It even occupies a place in literature. As early as 1871, Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking-Glass had a poem called The Jabberwocky. Here is the first stanza:

'Twas brillig, and the slithy toves
Did gyre and gimble in the wabe;
All mimsy were the borogroves
And the mome raths outgrabe.

Lewis Carroll called his idiom "portmanteau words," pointing out that they were combinations of two words. Thus slithy is a telescoping of slimy and lithe; mimsy, of miserable and flimsy. Explains this master of delightful nonsense: "Take the two words 'fuming' and 'furious.' Make up your mind you will say both words, but leave it unsettled which you will say first. Now open your mouth and speak. If your thoughts incline ever so little towards 'fuming' you will say 'fuming-furious.' If they turn, by even a hair's breadth, towards 'furious' you will say 'furious-fuming'; but if you have that rarest of gifts, a perfectly balanced mind, you will say 'frumious.'"

Although Finnegans Wake has received its share of ridicule as a large canvas splashed with undistilled double, it is important to note that Joyce stated flatly that he was attempting something linguistically abortive, but nevertheless progressive.

The fact that doubletalk is something more than mere muttering is proved by the fact that it requires intense application for anyone to speak it. Certain sounds lend themselves to it more readily than others. Here are some of them: oil, urf, erris, istan, urma, awn, orsin, eufen, eel, ail. Prefixed by consonants or syllables—for example, foil, spurf, flederris—they furnish a basic doubletalk vocabulary.

The point to remember in speaking any form of doubletalk is that it is imperative that you get your listener to agree with you. Thus, having selected a victim, you say, "Don't you think the dance bands are using too much brannis with napid mutes on the ristan?" If you're sufficiently fluent your victim will reply, "I think so." This is your cue to ask, "For example?" The victim then thinks a moment and perhaps says, "Harry James." This is your chance to fix him with a cold stare and demand, "Are you stupid? Since when did Harry James lead a symphony?" Such a procedure as this is guaranteed to make you unpopular at parties.

Agility

The most valuable physical asset and best protection of our fighting sons

THE MOST valuable "Human Machine" in any mechanized army today is the boy who can do a maximum of damage to the enemy with a minimum of damage to himself.

The agile boy who can flop to the ground—then leap to his feet and charge ahead, all in a flash—

The boy whose agility makes him just a fraction of a second faster at ducking into a fox hole, or a trench, under a sudden machine gun burst or a bomb—

The boy whose skill and agility give him a split second advantage with a bayonet thrust, a knife slash or a hand grenade—

The boy who sees, decides and acts just a shade faster—on land, on sea, or in the air—

These are the boys who are the best fighters—who are able to take care of themselves anywhere—and whose chances of coming back intact are 100% better than those who do not have these skills and agilities.

Actual physical fitness records of this war prove that the boys whose basic military training and basic calisthenics are supplemented by baseball, tennis, boxing, football, basketball, track, judo, etc., develop skills and agilities that make them the best fighting men in the world.

And our American boys must develop these skills and agilities in school, in college, on our sand lots and play fields, in training camps and behind the lines, if they are to be physically fit to meet the fanatically conditioned fighting men of our enemies.

No machines of this highly mechanized war are so essential to our success as these fine "Human Machines" that carry the hopes of America's freedom into the front lines of battle.

Could anything be more important than the equipment that is necessary to give them this priceless physical training?—to develop not only the strength and endurance, but the skills and agilities they must have to out-fight enemies who have been trained for war since childhood?

* * * *

So far as the materials made available to us, and facilities not engaged in war production permit, we will continue to supply equipment for the sports that help to make American fighting men the most efficient "Human Fighting Machines" in the war.

BING CROSBY PLAYS ROLE OF EMMETT, EARLY MINSTREL MAN AND COMPOSER OF "DIXIE"

MINSTREL SHOWS

"Dixie" traces history of blackface comedians

Paramount's Dixie is a light musical with the oldtime minstrel show for its historical background. Although time has been telescoped and the locale changed from New York's Bowery to New Orleans, the movie's story of blackface entertainment is fairly authentic. The title was taken from the song Dixie which was first performed by Bryant's Minstrels in New York, became the war song of the Confederacy and is today almost a second national anthem. The movie is a fictionalized biography of the author of Dixie, Daniel Decatur Emmett, who was also the founder of the first blackface troupe, the Virginia Minstrels. Bing Crosby (left) plays role of Emmett.

History reveals that minstrel shows were first presented just 100 years ago. In 1843 Dan Emmett was a composer living in a New York boardinghouse. Visiting him one day were "Hamhock" Whitlock, banjo player, Frank Brower, expert on the bones, and Dick Pelham, tambourinist. The quartet blacked their faces, put on a song-dance-joke show, called themselves the Virginia Minstrels. Advertising their show as "exempt from vulgarities," they gave first performance at the Chatham Theater. Novelty of white entertainers impersonating Negroes was immediately acclaimed.

From this beginning minstrel shows grew in size, for 50 years were America's most popular entertainment. All minstrels followed a pattern. After the "walk-round," which served as an entrance for the black-faced showmen, they stood before a semicircle of chairs and waited for the interlocutor's: "Gentlemen, be seated!" Principals were the end men, Tambo and Bones, who told jokes like, "Who was that lady I seen you with?" With them sat the singers and specialty artists dressed in gaudy frock coats and fancy pants. An evening's performance included ballad singing, comedy routines, clog dancing, banjo solos, and tambourine effects by the ensemble. These minstrel shows, which paraded down Main Street on the morning of a performance, brought humor and music to thousands of Americans.

Melchior OF THE "Met..." GREATEST HEROIC TENOR OF OUR TIME

THE MUSICAL WORLD has long agreed that Lauritz Melchior is one of the greatest living singers. The richness of his voice—his ability to infuse singing with poetry—his superb stage presence—make him the outstanding heroic tenor of our generation.

In addition to scenes from Wagner's "Tristan" and "Rienzi," Columbia Masterworks bring you recordings of Melchior of the "Met" in Verdi's "Othello"—the monologue Dio! Mi Potevi Scagliar, and the unforgettable Death Scene (Columbia 71389-D).

Now—Columbia presents Melchior singing the lovely, timeless music of his native Denmark. This new superlatively fine Masterworks album of Danish Song (X-233) is a musical expression of the ideals, the spirit, the long-lived musical culture of that great people.

Like many other famous artists, Melchior now records exclusively on Columbia Masterworks. These records are laminated—pressed in layers—with surfaces of highly sensitized, longer-wearing materials. The Sensitone-Surface, exclusive with Columbia, makes possible more lifelike tone and amazing freedom from needle noise.

Hear Melchior and other great artists as they really sound—recorded on Columbia Masterworks. Hear Lotte Lehmann, Kilenyi, Adolf Busch, Nelson Eddy, Stokowski, and many other famous concert and opera stars. On the Sensitone-Surface of Columbia Masterworks, great music, by the world's great artists, is faithfully yours!

Daniel Decatur Emmett was born in 1815. He learned to fiddle, wrote his famous song, Old Dan Tucker, at 15.

"Dixie" was first heard in September 1859 in Mechanics' Hall on Broadway near Grand Street. Before Bryant's Minstrels it housed Christy's Minstrels.

The composer of "Dixie" died a poor man at the age of 88. He is buried in Mount Vernon, Ohio.

DAN EMMETT WAS FATHER OF NEGRO MINSTRELSY AND COMPOSER OF THE SONG "DIXIE"

Dan Emmett, founder of the first minstrel troupe in America, is probably best known as the composer of Dixie. Few songs in America have had its popular appeal. Even today its historic associations move many people to tears or cheers. After a tour of England with his own Virginia Minstrels, Emmett returned to this country and joined Bryant's Minstrels as a composer. It was then that he wrote Dixie. Late on a Saturday night Jerry Bryant told him that they needed a new "walk-round." Sunday was a cold and rainy day. Emmett looked out of the window. A line, "I wish I was in Dixie," kept running through his mind. He began to hum an improvised tune to the words and by Monday Dixie was completed. It was first performed on Sept. 19, 1859 in New York at Mechanics' Hall (above).

The origin of the word "Dixie" to designate the Southern States has been disputed for many years. In the South the word is regarded as a derivation and corruption of "Mason and Dixon line." The most plausible theory is that the word stems from ten-dollar notes issued by the Citizens' Bank of Louisiana, which had the French word for ten, dix, printed on them and later came to be known as "Dixies."

The melody of Dirie traveled quickly. In 1861 it was presented in New Orleans at the Varieties Theater. From New Orleans it flashed over the South. It was first used by the Confederacy at the inauguration of Jefferson Davis at Montgomery, Ala. During the war, Emmett was almost lynched because he was mistaken for a Southern sympathizer. But after the surrender at Appomattox, Lincoln had Dirie played in Washington remarking that as they had captured the Rebel Army, they had also captured the rebel tune. Success of Dirie caused Emmett to say: "If I'd known it was going to be so popular, I'd have written it better."

From autograph copy of original Dixie's Land. Manuscript in Library of Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society.

The first verse of "Dixie" is rarely heard as Emmett wrote it. Beginning "Dis worl' was made in jess six days," it was later omitted because Mrs. Bryant feared that it might offend some of the religious members of the audience. Emmett sold the rights of the song for $300 to Firth, Pond & Co., music publishers, but pirated copies appeared all over South.

FALSE TEETH WEARERS

YOU RISK TWO DANGERS BY BRUSHING DENTAL PLATES OR BRIDGES WITH MAKESHIFT CLEANERS

Brushing your plates with makeshift cleaners, such as tooth paste, tooth powder and soap, may scratch the denture material which is 60 times softer than natural teeth. These scratches cause odorous stains, film, and food particles to collect faster and cling tighter...

resulting in Denture Breath. Remember, you may not know you have it, but others do! Besides, brushing with makeshift cleaners often wears down the delicate fitting ridges designed to hold your plate in place. With worn-down ridges of course your plate loosens.

BEWARE OF DENTURE BREATH and LOOSENED PLATES!

DO THIS EVERY DAY!

Place denture in Polident solution for 15 minutes, or longer if convenient. Rinse—and it's ready to use.

No brushing
No danger

PLAY SAFE—SOAK YOUR PLATE CLEAN IN POLIDENT

The safe, modern way to clean dental plates, partial plates and all removable bridges is to soak them clean in Polident every day. Polident is approved by many leading dentists and the leading makers of modern denture materials. No brushing, no danger, yet the daily Polident bath works into the corners and crevices no amount of brushing can reach—leaves your denture sparkling clean, odor-free.

WHAT A WONDERFUL IMPROVEMENT—DOUBLY SAFE!

Millions call Polident a blessing. No fear of Denture Breath—no risk of wearing down and loosening the plate. Polident used daily, maintains the original, natural appearance of your dental plate for less than a penny a day. Today—get Polident at any drug, department or variety store. 3 oz. size—30¢; 7 oz. size—60¢.

Minstrel Shows (continued)

Authentic pictures of oldtime minstrel street parades were used as background material for Paramount's Dixie. The bottom picture shows Bing Crosby with tambourine.

Early minstrel shows often had a "down-by-the-levee" scene such as one in top picture showing George Primrose and the Foley twins. Below is the Hollywood version.

Cadillac

Forty years of "know how" in its nose!

Before any of these pilots were born, Cadillac was acquiring a "know how" in manufacturing which will, we feel sure, stand many of them in good stead today.

For one of the wartime jobs entrusted to Cadillac craftsmen is the production of basic power-producing assemblies for America's most famed liquid-cooled aircraft engines. There's forty years of "know how" in the nose of every fighter plane so powered—forty years that help to endow each with a degree of dependability which only the utmost in precision manufacturing and craftsmanship can insure.

Thus the Cadillac peacetime traditions are carried on in time of war, with this far broader implication—

Cadillac's responsibility today is to nations as a whole—to all Americans—to our Allies—with the clear mandate to produce vital war materiel in necessary quantities until the need ceases to exist.

Cadillac proudly accepts this trust and is now engaged in war production to the fullest extent in its history. The M-5 light tank, built in its entirety in Cadillac plants, special machinery for the Navy, and other subcontracted war materiel are and will continue to be our sole concern until Victory is won.

BARE LEGS

Men distrust but women approve new leg make-up preparations

This picture shows a girl whose leg problem, if any, has been solved for at least three days. She has just completed a perfect make-up job on her bare legs. If she watches her step, keeps out of dirt and puddles, takes lukewarm showers (but no baths), the bottled stockings she has smoothly spread over her legs from toe to thigh will last three days.

Since stockings of rayon and cotton, the only kinds available this summer, are hot and sticky, legs of all ages, shapes and sizes are succumbing to the artifice of make-up. Bare legs look indecent. Sun-tanned legs are scaly and uneven in color. Make-up seems to be the solution. Although the many preparations on the market this year are less inclined than last year's to streak, smudge, spot in the rain, or come off on clothes, men are still skeptical. Their attitude is similar to that of Bob Howard who sings in the new musical Early to Bed, "It decants on your pants."

Bare Legs (continued)

In applying make-up important thing to remember is to use clean, upward strokes. Pour liquid into palm of one hand, quickly bring palms together and spread on with both hands.

Stocking seam is hard to put on, can be done with eyebrow pencil. Painted seams are resorted to only by women who must completely fool their shockable family, friends or bosses.

Length of "bottled" stocking depends on activity for which legs are being groomed. Girl at left, with make-up covering her thighs, is ready for anything from swimming to jitterbugging. Girl in center has just enough on to get by with an evening-length skirt. Girl at right has gone up far enough so that bare leg does not show below skirt when wind blows daytime skirt.

THE TOUCH OF TOMORROW IN THE PLANES OF TODAY

War Is a Skill Our Sons Must Learn

Every American soldier fights with courage and self-sacrifice. But these alone do not win wars. War also demands high technical skill because it is a struggle not only of men against men, but also of machine against machine—tanks, planes, battleships. Without training in the use of these instruments of war, soldiers today are without weapons!

One weapon in this war—the airplane—calls for more personal skill than any other. And one of the most critical phases in a pilot's training is his step-by-step transition from primary trainers to combat planes. These steps cannot be abrupt, yet time demands that they be swift. Therefore, along with the relative stability and safety required in a training plane, Fairchild engineered into its trainers certain definite characteristics of the combat plane. Thus, they get a pilot ready for his second step while teaching him the first!

Fairchild training planes—primary trainers, bomber crew trainers and gunnery trainers—are being used on United Nations training fields throughout the western hemisphere. They are powered by Fairchild Ranger aircraft engines. They reflect the 20 crowded years which Fairchild engineers have devoted to "creating the plane for the purpose."

The "touch of tomorrow" in Fairchild engineering indicates courage to try new things. We shall need many new things to outwit and outfight our resourceful enemies. Fairchild has quite a number on the way—to add to those already on its record!

THIS NEGRO (CENTER) HAS JUST BEEN SLUGGED BY YOUNG WHITE HOODLUMS IN DETROIT'S RACE RIOT AND IS FRANTICALLY TRYING TO ESCAPE BEFORE THEY HIT HIM AGAIN

RACE WAR IN DETROIT

Americans maul and murder each other as Hitler wins a battle in the nation's most explosive city

Last summer LIFE reported that Detroit was seething with factional bitterness and warned: "Detroit is Dynamite. . . Detroit can either blow up Hitler or it can blow up the U. S." (LIFE, Aug. 17). Last week some of Detroit's dynamite exploded in the bloodiest race riots the country has had since 1919. White and black Detroiters slugged, clubbed, gouged, stoned, kicked, stabbed and shot each other until 31 were dead, more than 600 injured and 1,800 arrested. Detroit's news photographers (one of whom is shown in the picture above being threatened by Negro-beating hoodlums) did an outstanding job of recording the truth about the riots. On these nine pages LIFE presents some of their best pictures so that Americans everywhere can see what happens when race prejudice, rumor-mongering and hate propaganda do their worst in a great American city.

After several thousand soldiers in full battle dress put down the riot, a fact-finding committee appointed by Governor Kelly of Michigan went to work to determine its causes. But most Detroiters already knew the causes. Said the Detroit Free Press: "Detroit has been building steadily for three years toward a race riot." Named by the Free Press and other observers as contributing largely to last week's riot were: 1) Detroit's abominable housing situation, which condemns thousands of white and Negro war workers to living in slums, tents and trailers; 2) the tremendous migration of white and Negro war workers from the South since 1940; 3) "race" strikes and friction in war plants (a month ago 20,000 Packard workers walked out because three Negro workers were up-graded to the assembly line); and 4) juvenile rowdiness, which has increased during the war (last month 100 white and Negro youths fought a pitched battle in a Detroit playground). C. I. O. leaders blamed the Ku-Klux Klan for the riot, and Negro spokesmen charged that Detroit police and the "pussy-footing" attitude of Mayor Edward J. Jeffries were responsible for much of the violence. Although the riot was definitely a victory for Adolf Hitler and other enemies of the U. S., there was no evidence that it had been planned by foreign agents, local Fascists or anyone else. It broke out suddenly on a hot Sunday night, and its basic cause was an old, ugly fact in U. S. life: prejudice and misunderstanding between the white and black races.

The "incident" which started the riot was a fist fight between a Negro and a white man on a crowded bridge leading from the Belle Isle public amusement park to the city proper. A rumor quickly spread among other Negroes on the island that whites had killed a Negro mother and her baby and thrown them in the water. (This was completely false.) The rumor reached Hastings Street in "Paradise Valley," the old Negro slum section where Champion Joe Louis once lived. Bands of Negro hoodlums broke into pawnshops, stole some guns, looted white-run stores and stoned automobiles driven by whites. A doctor answering a late call was beaten to death. Police who rushed to the area were fired on and they fired back. Of the 31 known dead in the riot, 15 were Negroes shot by city police. White gangs, barred from the Negro area by police guns and tear gas, took over Woodward Avenue, Detroit's main thoroughfare, where they hauled isolated Negroes from autos and streetcars, beat them up and set fire to their cars. In most cases the police were either too outnumbered or too indifferent to stop these white attacks. The action photographs on these pages show the white mobs who raged unchecked through the heart of Detroit until the troops arrived on Monday night.

Young Negro (extreme right) makes a dash across Woodward Avenue, Detroit, with a mob of whites in pursuit. Many riot victims who wound up in hospitals didn't know what it was all about. A Detroit News reporter found a white man and a Negro sitting side by side at one hospital, waiting for treatment. The white man said he was coming home from work at an aircraft plant; when he got off the streetcar a gang beat him up. The Negro said some men started chasing him and he tore his hand on a barbed-wire fence getting away. Both were utterly bewildered.

Well-dressed Negro (note white shoes, silk hat lining) has been dragged off streetcar on Woodward Avenue and is being attacked by three white men. A fourth man looks on, smiling. After being knocked down, kicked and bloodied, Negroes were told to beat it before the cops came.

This Negro was driving the car at right when the mob forced him to the curb. He tried to run away but the mobster at left tripped him to the pavement, where he was beaten and kicked. His car was overturned and burned. The rioters started many fires by smashing gasoline tanks.

Fleeing Negro, who looks as though he is already hurt, is chased by mobsters armed with lead pipe (center) and beer bottle (right). Rioters also used stones, bricks, clubs, metal belt buckles and chunks of loose iron. Note the bandage on arm of man with lead pipe; reporters saw many members of the mob wearing fresh bandages and heard one boasting: "I killed one of 'em at 2:30 this morning." This picture was taken by a Free Press photographer. Many rioters and their victims were war workers. Riot caused an absentee list up to 90% in some Detroit plants.

Struggling Negro is hauled from a streetcar near downtown Detroit by four white men, while the helpless motorman looks on. In some cases mobs invaded cars and smashed Negroes' heads against floors in view of women passengers. Carmen who tried to interfere were savagely beaten.

This Negro was well-dressed before mob got hold of him, tore off his coat and one suspender. Now they are closing in on him again; he does not know which way to turn. Note man in overalls at left, trying to hold back a rioter. A few seconds after this the Negro was badly beaten.

Policeman protects an injured Negro while waiting for a car to take him to the hospital. The Negro's shirt is bloody and one of his shoes has been ripped off in an earlier beating. Some of the crowd around him would like to beat him some more, but they are scared by the cop's club—as a rule, mobs are made up of individual cowards. The Negro cannot get away anyway, so he sits quietly in the street and watches his tormentors. Note the little grimacing rowdy to right and just behind the policeman. He is trying to stir up crowd to further bloody violence.

Rioter slaps a Negro who is being held by two policemen, while a large gang of white hoodlums surges in from behind. Throughout the riot the Detroit police were tougher on Negroes than whites. They used tear gas and (sometimes) night sticks on white mobs, tommy guns and pistols on Negroes. They killed 15 Negroes, most of whom were said to be "looting," and no whites, although white gangs overturned police cars and beat up policemen in rescuing rioters who had been arrested. Note woman at left in this picture; many women were seen among the rioters.

Policeman falls into the arms of another officer, knocked cold by a pop bottle. By a weird trick of mob psychology, the white rioters raised the cry of "Hitlerism!" when the police tried to stop their abuse of Negroes. They yelled, "Just like Germany," when police turned tear gas on them. One white youth snarled "Yah, you damn Gestapo" at the policemen who seized him for beating a Negro. Apparently they did not realize they were the ones who looked and acted like Nazis. This picture and others on these pages were taken by a Detroit Times photographer.

Marching mob of young whites parades through downtown Detroit en route to the riot. Detroiters were puzzled and disturbed over the sudden appearance of youthful gangs like this. Many looked old enough to be drafted while others were only 15 or 16. In the Negro section the average age of the rioters was 21, which is well over the draft minimum. One significant fact about the riot was that all fighting occurred in segregated sections which are either all-white or all-Negro. There was no rioting in the districts where whites and Negroes live as neighbors.

Whites barred from Negro area line up at the curb under the watchful eyes of police (above). White truck drivers, salesmen, insurance agents who ventured into the section between Grand Boulevard and Detroit River, where 80,000 Negroes live, were mercilessly stoned and, in some cases, killed. Below, police with tommy guns hold back white rioters at end of a Negro street while tear gas explodes in the block. A few rioters have broken through (left) and are heading for Negro houses. Photographer Joseph Locke was gassed while taking these pictures for LIFE.

Soldier rescues a fear-crazed Negro boy from the mob in downtown Detroit. The Negro, badly hurt and dazed, clings to his protector, who is blowing a whistle for help. A second soldier (right, rear) is helping get him away. Servicemen in uniform saved many Negroes during the riot. The Free Press reported that three sailors rescued a Negro and broke up a small mob of pursuing whites in front of the City Hall. When a rioter snarled "What's it to you?" one sailor told him: "Plenty! There was a colored guy in our outfit and he saved a couple of lives."

Negro "suspect" is cornered by police who seem ready to use their clubs. The worst fighting took place between police and Negro gangs who looted white-owned stores in the Negro area. Negro proprietors quickly put up "COLORED MAN ONLY" signs to protect their property.

Beaten Negro, still clutching his blood-stained hat, is helped to safety by two white youths. Negroes reported many instances of white aid during the riot. Some white streetcar passengers hid Negroes under their seats and sat on top of them to keep them away from the rioters.

Negro-owned car blazes on Detroit street after it was overturned and set afire by mob. Scores of automobiles, from flashy Lincolns to shabby flivvers, were destroyed during the riot. Once the mob pulled a Negro from his car and beat him in front of his wife and small daughter.

Looted store in Negro section is inspected by distraught owner. Note single egg on shelf at the left. So many stores like this were smashed that thousands of Negro families could not get food for days after the riot. A Riot Information Bureau was established to help them.

"Me too, Admiral!"

WHEN ADMIRAL FARRAGUT SAID 'Damn the torpedoes—full speed ahead!', he wasn't thinking of Lend-Lease-laden convoys, Axis U-boats and the deadly, devastating 'tin fish' of today.

But no words could better epitomize the spirit of America's merchant seamen: the guys who stick to their jobs despite one . . . three . . . five torpedoings.

And so, because this spirit is wonderful and American, we at Warner Bros. have made a motion picture about the men of the U.S. Merchant Marine. It's called 'ACTION IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC'.

And like every Warner Bros. picture, it's more than great entertainment. It recognizes that you're busy helping to win a war ...that every minute you spare for motion pictures should be a minute well-spent—in terms of entertainment plus the kind of special 'lift' you got from 'Yankee Doodle Dandy', 'Casablanca', 'Air Force', 'Mission to Moscow' and right on down the Warner Bros. hit-line.

We're proud to have made 'Action In The North Atlantic'—but even prouder that, in recognition, Warner Bros. is the first company to win the Maritime Commission's Victory Flag!

General MacArthur steps out of plane at an advance air base somewhere in New Guinea. He is wearing none of his decorations. A convert to airpower, he used planes to supply whole campaign in New Guinea.

MacARTHUR

A GREAT AMERICAN SOLDIER DOES A GREAT JOB IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC

by GEORGE JOHNSTON

Late in October 1942, General Douglas MacArthur transferred his headquarters from Australia to Port Moresby, the Allied base in New Guinea. The word of his coming had spread by "grapevine telegraph" around the town and up into the mountains where tattered, hungry Australians were fighting desperately to drive back the spearhead of General Horii's Buna invasion force. For a while the men stopped discussing the all-important fact that the "wet" was coming in early and talked about their legendary commander whose name has the same remote magic for his troops that it does for the people of two continents. They were curious to see him.

And then MacArthur came, with a fleet of bombers and a top cover of P-38's arrowheading through the overcast. As his plane bumped to a halt on the rough Moresby landing strip, the General stepped out, wearing the cap with the festoons of gold braid but without his glittering chestful of medals. Infantrymen lined the airfield and the roadway down which he drove with an escort of armored cars. Looking fit and grim, he went straight to the headquarters which had been prepared for him and disappeared inside.

Moresby at that time was the most uninhibited place in the world. There were a lot of things you couldn't get there, mainly privacy. Generals slept in tents on the jungle floor. Naked men wandered through the town at will and swam in the lukewarm harbor waters. Even when Australian and American nurses arrived, the order to screen all roadside showers was obeyed for only a few days, and after that you could again see scores of nude soldiers bathing beside the fire hydrants on the main street of town.

In this little world of non-privacy, MacArthur obtained complete privacy. His headquarters was a little white bungalow, newly painted, with the luxury of a septic tank system and wide verandas looking out on a lovely garden of pink frangipani and scarlet poinciana. It was staffed by native servants in white, skirtlike ramis, embellished with red stripes and blue stars. The bungalow carried the name that MacArthur has given to every place he has made his headquarters: "Bataan."

From this little bungalow General MacArthur seldom emerged. He left it to his subordinate commanders to get around among the troops, to survey the terrain and to investigate Japanese positions. The Commander in Chief of the Southwest Pacific stayed inside with his staff and directed the New Guinea campaign—one of the most successful ever carried out in such difficult terrain with such paralyzing problems of supply.

Once in a while, at night, an excited doughboy would catch sight of the great man as he paced up and down on the veranda of his bungalow, head bowed, clad in a black silk dressing gown with a red dragon on the back, munching a green head of lettuce. His light would burn far into the morning, and sometimes you could see his shadow on the window shade as he read reports from the battlefield or issued orders for the great triple-pronged offensive that was smashing the Japs back to the Buna beaches where they had landed four months before. Usually he was alone. One of the sentries, jerking his head at the light burning dimly in the General's room, said, "You know, that guy must be just about the loneliest man in the world."

MacArthur has had a spate of hero-worship and publicity such as is given to few generals. Yet he remains probably the greatest enigma of the war—to the layman. To the professional soldier there is no enigma except the eternal enigma of genius. For the professional soldier knows that MacArthur is a great, a very great soldier. A warrior straight out of medieval times with conceptions of warfare at least as modern as those of any other soldier living. A man with flamboyance in his speech and his writings, a man with an incredible veneer of showmanship who is at the same time a recluse, seldom seen even by his troops, a man so remote that he is almost a mystical figure. A man who became a world hero because he was in command of an army that was defeated. It is true that the defeat was a glorious George Johnston, 30, is an Australian war correspondent now in the U. S. He covered General MacArthur from his arrival in Australia for the Melbourne Argus and through the New Guinea campaign for LIFE and Time. While here, the question most frequently asked him is, "What do you think of MacArthur?" This article is the answer by a shrewd and able journalist who confines himself to his own personal observations of the general in action. Despite petty jealousies and spiteful rivalries in and out of Washington, General MacArthur emerges here, as he must in history, a very great soldier.

one from the standpoint of American arms, but generally the people who set up idols remember the defeat and not the glory that preceded that defeat. Not so with MacArthur.

To attempt to evaluate this mystery man it is necessary to recall the background of the theater in which he has been commanding general since March 1942. When MacArthur was brought out of the Philippines at the request of the Australian Government, that country was facing its days of darkest peril. It takes a mental effort even now to remember those days of March and April as they really were. The Japanese, unbeatable everywhere, were spreading their tentacles southward at an alarming rate. A few weeks before, they had raided Darwin and brought war to Australian soil for the first time. Australia's picked fighting troops were fighting—but they were fighting on the other side of the world in Africa. Because of commitments to distant battlefields the country was drained not only of trained men but of equipment. Some units were drilling with wooden guns. Australia was faced with the appalling prospect of fixing a main defense line along the Tropic of Capricorn just north of Brisbane, and abandoning, if necessary, the northern third of the continent to the Japanese invaders. North of the "Brisbane Line," there would be merely holding garrisons—burnt offerings. There was talk of retreating down the strategic Darwin road, with battle headquarters at Alice Springs in the "Dead Heart" of Australia. Port Moresby—within a few months to become the key to the whole Southwest Pacific—was a tiny, undermanned, underequipped garrison which wasn't too sure that it would be able to carry out its order, in the event of invasion, to "hold the enemy for 36 hours to enable mainland defenses to be prepared." Even Australians, who are not generally given to hysterics, admitted that things looked "bloody tough!"

"MacArthur will fix things"

MacArthur arrived in Australia from the Philippines on March 17. "MacArthur will fix things," everybody said confidently. He moved through cheering, madly excited crowds. He posed unsmilingly for an endless series of photographs. Newborn babies were named after the Hero of Bataan. Restaurant chefs named dishes for him. And then he went into his headquarters . . . and into the solitude which always surrounds him.

People who telephoned his headquarters always received the greeting: "Hello. Bataan speaking." Bataan was almost an obsession, a cult, with him. It still is. The army he had to leave behind on the corpse-littered battlefield of Bataan, in the blasted citadel of Corregidor, is never out of his mind. He lives for the day when he will stand again upon the soil of the Philippines. He seldom talks of the war against Japan without bringing in some reference to Bataan. And when he does he usually gives solemn utterance to a sentence he has used over and over again: "I shall keep the soldier's faith." The dead of Bataan live in the hearts of many, and in the heart of MacArthur they live together with a brooding, eternal lust for vengeance.

MacArthur has admitted bitterly that when he arrived in Australia he expected to start at once building up a great army which would liberate the Philippines. The Australians, too, had expected that where MacArthur was, there would soon be the planes and guns and men of the U. S. The great crusading force that MacArthur and many Australians had visualized never was built up in Australia. Perhaps, now, it never will be.

But in the month of March many things happened. Overnight MacArthur scrapped the "Brisbane Line" policy of defense. In its place he planned so that the Battle for Australia, if it had to be fought, should be fought in New Guinea at the far side of the Coral Sea. He could do this only by establishing his air striking power and his best garrisons as near to the Japanese as possible. At that time it was not certain whether the Japanese were building up to strike in the northeast, against New Guinea, or in the northwest, against Darwin. All Japanese operations were designed to create that very doubt in our minds. MacArthur shrewdly gambled on New Guinea. He was right. And into Port Moresby he threw his best troops, his best equipment, every aircraft he had available. With newly arrived American matériel and with the aid of steadily expanding Australian production, he was able almost immediately to push his bomber line 600 miles across the Coral Sea to Port Moresby which became, not a garrison standing beneath the shadow of invasion, but the major Allied operational base of the Southwest Pacific. He got there "fustest with the mostest." The Japs were committed. Whether they wanted to or not, they had to face up to Moresby which, if they had only known, could have been theirs almost for the asking, less than two months before. MacArthur played his cards so that he dictated to the Japanese that New Guinea should become the major theater of the Pacific war.

"It doesn't matter how much you have, so long as you fight with what you have," said MacArthur. "It doesn't matter where you fight, so long as you fight. Because where you fight the enemy has to fight too, and even though it splits your force, it must split his force also. So fight, on whatever the scale, whenever and wherever you can. There is only one way to win victories. Attack, attack, attack!"

It was MacArthur's policy speech. Since then he has had dark periods, but he has stuck to his platform. And it has worked.

The more he threw into the Southwest Pacific battlefronts, the more the Japs had to throw in to meet him. Within a few months an island sideshow, a backwater of battle, had become the major theater of the Pacific war, the focal point of the whole fight against Japan.

Securing air domination

And, in proportion to the gains made, no section of the Pacific war has been so costly to the enemy in ships, manpower and aircraft. The fight was, first of all, to secure air domination. It was a tough fight, one of the toughest of the war. The infant American Fifth Air Force and the R. A. A. F. were "fighting with what they had." Hundreds of young airmen gave their lives to wrest command of the air from Japan's best Navy fliers. Against what should have been an overwhelming air superiority, they succeeded. From that time the air became the dominant factor in all MacArthur's plans.

Yet in July, when command of the air had at last been won and Australia, at least, seemed safe from invasion, MacArthur was far from satisfied. He called war correspondents together, outlined to them his conceptions of war in the Pacific. He spoke for three hours, and always through his speech there was the attitude of a man who wanted to lead a crusade, but who realized at last that the crusade had been definitely postponed. He still wanted to attack, but he was still fighting on the defensive.

No man who has ever written about MacArthur has attempted to disguise the streak of showmanship that is part and parcel of the man. Since the days of Julius Caesar, showmanship has never in itself prevented a man from being a good soldier. Australians asked only that the man who led their forces should lead them well. And as the months went by there was continued evidence that they were being led well.

MacArthur's press interviews

When he was interviewed, the four-star general would always have a stage property—a long, unlighted cigar one time, a chunky bulldog pipe another. And he used the properties for gesticulation and emphasis with the histrionic ability of Sir Henry Irving. But when he was asked a question, he never hesitated in giving an answer that was not only utterly complete but which was in itself, taken down verbatim, a polished essay on military lore. He could talk solidly for two hours and never grope for a word. Each talk would hold the complete interest of twoscore of hard-bitten foreign correspondents without a second's flagging. The General would pace up and down incessantly (whenever he was thinking out some problem the whole staff would know and comment on the fact that "the Old Man is rug-cutting upstairs"), drawing for parallel and metaphor on the writings of Napoleon, on a line or two from a melodrama he had seen in New York a quarter of a century before, on a speech by Lincoln, on a statement by Plato, or sometimes on a passage from Scripture. The tone of his voice would vary from almost a whisper to a ringing shout followed by a long period of thoughtful silence.

Occasionally he would write a statement to be issued under his own name. Nobody but MacArthur could have issued those statements so rich in emotion and drama, so studded with resounding passages of almost Biblical style. They were so completely unlike the statements of any other soldier in the world—and so utterly like MacArthur.

Deep piety, swift epigram, vivid description come from his lips or his pen with a facility that makes a book on Famous Sayings by MacArthur a distinct possibility. Sometimes he gave terse common sense as in his famous, "Only those are fit to live who are not afraid to die." Of the Japanese soldier he said, "He is like any other soldier; he is no fanatic; he dies with his mother's name on his lips." His most succinct comment was his answer to the question, "What is the formula for defensive warfare?" "Defeat!" snapped MacArthur. There is plain logic in such statements as, "The springs of human conflict cannot be eradicated through institutions, but only through the reform of the individual human being." Another: "Victory in war results from no mysterious alchemy or wizardry, but depends entirely upon the concentration of superior force at the critical points of combat."

Often his statements have deep piety. Talking of the men of Bataan, he said: "I was the leader of that lost cause, and from the bottom of my stricken heart I pray that a merciful God may not delay too long their redemption." In awarding decorations after the victorious Papuan campaign he ended his citation with the words: "To Almighty God I give thanks for that guidance which has brought us to this success in our great crusade. His is the honor, the power and the glory forever."

Some of his statements have the power of a trip hammer. Once he said, in reference to a dead soldier: "I do not know the dignity of his birth, but I do know the glory of his death." His single sentence on Corregidor still evokes a picture that no other words have painted better: "Through the bloody haze of its last reverberating shot I shall always seem to see the vision of its grim, gaunt and ghostly men, still unafraid." His tribute to the men of Bataan was: "The Bataan force went out as it would have wished, fighting to the end of its flickering, forlorn hope. . . . Nothing became it more than its last hour of trial and agony."

MacArthur moves to New Guinea

By September the Japanese were running into trouble in the South Pacific. The Marines had landed on Guadalcanal (an operation greatly assisted by the hammering which MacArthur's heavy bombers delivered to the great Jap supply base at Rabaul) and the Jap attempt to take Milne Bay had failed. But north of Moresby, where the Japs were sweeping over the Owen Stanley Range, the situation was critical for the Allied forces. It was then that MacArthur transferred his own headquarters to New Guinea. The Australian commander of ground forces, General Sir Thomas Blamey, was already there, living in a tent. There too was Lieut. General George Kenney, MacArthur's new air commander.

One of the luckiest things that happened to the forces fighting in the Southwest Pacific area was the War Department's decision to send Lieut. General George Kenney out to take command of the Allied Air Forces under MacArthur. Kenney was an evangelist for airpower properly employed. His first—and most important—convert was MacArthur. Since then no general in the U. S. Army has been more fanatically air-minded than MacArthur.

His own experiences in the Philippines had taught MacArthur the power of the airplane in war. The situation in the Southwest Pacific had revealed the impossibility of fighting an island war without aviation. But it was Kenney who showed MacArthur how to make airpower the decisive element in his operations. The little air commander was a personal demonstration of air mobility. He flew back and forth so regularly between his two headquarters in Australia and New Guinea that two meal tables were always set for him 1,500 miles apart and nobody knew from day to day at which table he would be sitting down to eat.

When MacArthur was confronted by the swift Japanese advance through the Owen Stanleys in early September, and by the problem of shifting reinforcements to New Guinea in time to meet the threat, and of supplying them when they got there, it was Kenney who is supposed to have said: "Give me five days to prepare and I'll shift the whole damn United States Army to New Guinea by air."

An army supplied by air

He sold the idea to MacArthur. The Commander in Chief in a marathon conference with Kenney and Blamey, the Australian commander of Allied land forces, mapped out the great pattern of air movement and supply which at that time made the Luftwaffe invasion of Crete seem like an elementary essay. A whole army with its supplies and food and guns was flown 600 miles across the Coral Sea. Much of it was then flown over mountains whose peaks reach 13,400 feet, and then, for four months, a fighting army was maintained entirely by aircraft, which altogether shifted more than a million tons of war supplies across the towering alpine spine.

This movement was the "swift, massive strokes" about which MacArthur later spoke at length. When the Papuan campaign was in its final stages MacArthur was in his headquarters with Kenney. Someone asked the General if he was convinced that airpower could win the war. He threw his arm affectionately around Kenney's shoulder and said, with a smile, "This little feller has given me a new and

HOW NESCAFÉ CONSERVES COFFEE

Each pound of coffee used in the manufacture of Nescafé produces at least 20 more cups of the same strength than is produced by ordinary household methods. Here is why:

1. Nestlé's process extracts all the good from the coffee beans.
2. Nescafé's added carbohydrates "seal in" the flavor and aroma.
3. No waste! You make the exact amount you need.

Almost all of today's Nescafé goes to our armed forces; but whether used on the home front or the fighting front... it makes precious coffee go much further.

A Nestlé product, composed of equal parts of skillfully brewed soluble coffee and added carbohydrates (dextrins, maltose and dextrose) added solely to protect the flavor.

pretty powerful brandy. I like the stuff. It does me good. And I'm going to keep right on taking it!"

MacArthur's spirits rose as he saw his troops inexorably smashing the army of General Tomatore Horii. When he spoke of the campaign he spoke always in the first person. It was never a great body of troops maneuvering, deploying, attacking another great body of the enemy. To MacArthur it was more a great battle of wits between two commanding generals. Said MacArthur of his Jap adversary: "He ran into the trap I prepared for him, and I shall drive him back to the beaches and annihilate him. . . . He had no idea of the plan I was putting into operation. . . . He never believed I could do it. . . ."

He could not conceal his pleased satisfaction when the reports came in that Horii—Japan's expert on small-boat landing operations—had been drowned when his raft overturned in the flooded Kumusi River. "An ignominious death," said MacArthur. As he spoke, however, there was an expression of regret on his face. The listener felt that MacArthur would have wished that he had fought it out with Horii and had killed him with his own hands.

"Hit them, and hit them again"

Like everyone else in New Guinea at that time, he thought that the job of smashing the Japanese on the northern plains would be easier than it actually turned out to be. He referred to the Japanese as being "trapped within the Buna beachhead" on Nov. 7, at a time when the enemy beachhead was actually nearly 50 miles wide. And it was several weeks after his Order of the Day was issued—"Buna must be taken today at whatever the cost"—that Buna actually fell. And even then there was tough fighting to come.

Nobody, not even MacArthur, could have foreseen the tenacity of those beleaguered Japanese, but never for a single moment did MacArthur relax his pressure. "Hit them, and hit them again. Attack, attack, attack!" He didn't want to drive them out. He wanted to destroy them. And he did.

He had fought nearly a year of war in the Southwest Pacific. He had built up a remarkable score of victories, small and large. He had suffered no lasting reverse of any sort. His one complaint was that he didn't have the stuff to follow up after his blows had made the enemy groggy. And, although he didn't say it, we knew that the thing that worried him most was the fact that employment of Allied force in the Southwest Pacific was not dictated—as basic military principles insist it should be dictated—by enemy employment of force. His main concern was aircraft, for he had just completed a campaign in which the new worth of aircraft, for attack, for defense, for logistics, had been forever proved. If the attitudes of Washington disturbed him he never showed it, never spoke of it. He was a soldier obeying orders.

MacArthur's position in Australia is unique and delicate. He commands a theater in which all the civilians and at least half of the troops are of another nationality. When he took over command, the Australians expected, as he did, that he would draw from the United States a great stream of troops and guns and planes. They were disappointed, as he was. MacArthur's military force today is scarcely, if at all, larger than on the day he left Bataan.

MacArthur's popularity in Australia

Yet MacArthur's popularity in Australia has never wavered. So far as the Australian Government is concerned, it has given an incredibly arduous task to MacArthur and, even under the most adverse conditions, he has carried through without a hitch. It is generally said that Prime Minister Curtin would cut off his right arm and send it by air freight to MacArthur if the Hero of Bataan asked for it. MacArthur hasn't needed it so far.

He is always careful to crush any tendency among people to think that "the Yanks came here to save Australia." Whenever he has to issue a statement dealing with Allied troops he takes pains to see that it is worded "Australians and Americans" wherever it can be done, rather than "Americans and Australians." When the Australians were bearing the brunt of the battle in the Owen Stanley Range, long before the American ground troops had seen action, censorship instructions were issued to the effect that all press reports should refer to the fighting troops as "Allied" instead of "Australian." There was some resentment among several war correspondents who insisted that MacArthur was trying to convert what was a purely Australian ground victory into a combined success. This was actually unjust. At that time it was important to prevent the Japanese from knowing that the Americans were being kept intact as a separate

behind fighting men

EVERY day the railroads deliver to the military camps, the naval stations, the shipyards, the ports for overseas — enough freight cars to make a train 150 miles long.

That's what they handle just for the Army Transportation Corps, the Naval Transportation Service Division, and the U. S. Maritime Commission's shipyards.

But there's more to it than that. There are the other thousands of miles of freight cars which are moving the mountains of raw materials, the fuel, the parts and the machines, the food and the supplies of every sort for war worker and civilian — altogether twice as much of it as was moved three years ago.

And on top of that there are the passengers — military, naval and civilian — nearly four times as many as there were when war began.

And it's all to be moved with very little more equipment — cars and engines — than the railroads had then.

But — with the wholehearted help of the nation's shippers, with the good humor and understanding of the passengers — the job is being done.

It is being done by getting more and more service out of railroad plant, power and equipment — by putting fighting transportation behind fighting men.

force to be flown into the north-coast areas for the final assault on Buna. MacArthur knows that by far the greater portion of the ground fighting in New Guinea has been done by Australians, and he is thankful to have under him the Australian Imperial Forces divisions that saw such distinguished service in the Middle East.

MacArthur has been one of the staunchest supporters of Australia's war effort, has twice contributed large sums of money to Australia's war loans. "No nation in the world is making a more supreme war effort than Australia," he said. "It embraces equally all classes and all parties." Because he is satisfied that he is being given what the Australians call a "good spin," he is careful not to interfere in the home scene. MacArthur's political support in Australia is all-party. Because so much depends upon him he could, if he desired, exert a profound effect on the Australian political structure. But his fight is against the Japanese, and he believes firmly in letting the politicians take care of the politics.

I believe sincerely that MacArthur has no political ambitions in the United States. I feel that one of the greatest injuries done to a man who has undeniably carried out a magnificent military job was the press campaign of "MacArthur for President." MacArthur, I know, would much rather be remembered in history as the "Liberator of the Philippines" than as President of the United States. His aim is to "keep the soldier's faith"—and that faith doesn't carry him into party politics.

After the Buna campaign was over and MacArthur had returned to his headquarters in Australia, I saw him again. He looked younger than at any time since he had arrived in my country. His hair was black, his eyes alert, his step springy. At 63 years he was the youngest-looking man for his age I had ever seen. He was no longer wearing his bedecorated uniform. This time he wore a pair of slacks and a simple leather flying jacket. The leather name tab on the pocket bore the one word, "MacArthur," and four silver stars were painted on each shoulder. There was no sign of the early bitterness. He looked happy, he joked with correspondents, he answered every question they asked with frankness and, for him, a complete absence of theatricals. His confidence in being able to lick the Japs could be detected in every remark, seen in every gesture. Perhaps he felt that he had dealt out at least some of the retribution for the men of Bataan. At any rate, his only comment was: "The dead of Bataan will rest easier tonight!"

"The soldier's faith" is continually pledged by MacArthur. Here he stands, with his head solemnly bowed, before a shrine built in honor of Australia's World War I dead.

MARIE CHARLIE, A YOUNG NAVAJO SHEPHERDESS, WATCHES OVER HER FLOCK OF HEAVILY EXPECTANT EWES AND ONE SMALL WRINKLED LAMB THAT WAS BORN DURING THE NIGHT

Life Goes to a Sheep Ranch in Lambing Time

This year in lambing time, the flocks of fat sheep that bleat their way across the windy ranges of New Mexico had a new kind of herder to watch them. So many men were called to war that big ranchers hired Navajo women from the reservation to tend their sheep. On the 300,000-acre Floyd Lee ranch near Grants, N. Mex., LIFE Photographer Hansel Mieth found that the simple, dark-skinned Indian women had restored to the sheep industry some of its pastoral old-world look.

Lambing went well under the squaws who were tender with the lambs, patient with the sheep, and very agile at chasing stragglers (opposite page). Usually they came with their families. Each family was given 300 ewes to guard and was paid 50¢ for every lamb it brought through the 40-day lambing season when cold, coyotes and forgetful mothers make a lamb's life risky. So far as ranchers could see, the Navajo women had only one fault. They refused to kill any coyotes because they believe that after death a squaw's soul lives on in the body of a coyote and a squaw who killed a coyote might be prejudicing her chances of future life.

A poor little lost lamb, just a couple of days old, trots bleating across the sparse plain trying to find its mother who, like so many ewes, is careless about her young.

Rescued by the shepherdess, the forlorn lamb is carried back to the flock, will soon be reunited with its mother who was probably too busy nibbling to notice her loss.

Just to share our thoughts with somebody else—or our picnic lunch with a friend—helps us to keep our balance in a topsy turvy world. For millions of Americans the simple joys of companionship are made deeper, richer, more satisfying with a glass of friendly SCHLITZ . . . brewed with just the kiss of the hops, none of the bitterness.

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS

Relying upon Winchester is an Old American Custom

Down from the skies come U. S. Paratroops. A new American fighting force in this war, it is natural they should need a new firearm. And just as natural that it should be originated, engineered and designed by Winchester!

This Winchester Carbine, officially called the U. S. Carbine Caliber .30, M1, weighs little more than one-half as much as the standard service rifle. It's greater in fire power, longer in range, faster in action and more deadly in accuracy than the automatic pistol. Reliance upon Winchester gun-making craftsmanship is natural to Americans. For perhaps nothing which has ever been made in America has been so much a part of our nation's history as Winchester guns and ammunition.

Look at the record: In 1866, the Winchester Model 66, the world's first commercially successful repeating rifle, was born. Men swore and lived by it. In Mexico, it helped Juarez break the despotic yoke of Maximilian. A few years later, the Model 73 became as renowned as the heroes of the Western plains who lived by it.

In the Spanish American War and World War I, Winchester fought for America. And today, Winchester is on every battle front.

All America today knows the history of the U. S. M1 Garand rifle that won its spurs at Bataan and Wake Island. Here at Winchester, we are producing Garand rifles in ever increasing quantities. Better yet, our 76 years of gun-making craftsmanship made it possible for us to cut their unit cost to Uncle Sam . . . to one-half their original contract price!

Such outstanding gun-making achievements as these are the reasons for the unquestioned reliance that America reposes in Winchester—in both war and peace.

A SPECIAL PREPARATION FOR SHAVING

FOR THE 1 MAN IN 7
WHO SHAVES DAILY

It Needs No Brush
Not Greasy or Sticky

Modern life now demands at least 1 man in 7 shave every day—and men in service must get clean shaves, too. Yet daily shaving often causes razor scrape, irritation.

To help men solve this problem, we perfected Glider—a rich, soothing cream. It's like "vanishing cream"—not greasy or sticky.

SMOOTHS DOWN SKIN

You first wash your face thoroughly with hot water and soap to remove grit and the oil from the skin that collects on whiskers every 24 hours. Then spread on Glider quickly and easily with your fingers. Never a brush. Instantly Glider smooths down the flaky top layer of your skin. It enables the razor's sharp edge to glide over your skin, cutting your whiskers close and clean without scraping or irritating the skin.

ESPECIALLY FOR THE 1 MAN
IN 7 WHO SHAVES DAILY

For men who must shave every day—doctors, lawyers, businessmen, service men—Glider is invaluable. It eliminates the dangers frequent shaving may have for the tender face and leaves your skin smoother, cleaner. Glider has been developed by The J. B. Williams Co., who have been making fine shaving preparations for over 100 years.

SEND FOR GUEST-SIZE TUBE

If you want to try Glider right away, get a regular tube from your dealer. If you can wait a few days, we'll send a generous Guest-Size tube for a dime and any used metal tube. It is enough for three weeks and is very handy for traveling.

On this test we rest our case entirely—for we are positive that Glider will give you more shaving comfort than anything you've used.

Send your name and address with ten cents and a used tube to The J. B. Williams Co., Dept. CG-07, Glastonbury, Conn., U. S. A. (Canada: Ville La Salle, Que.) Offer good in U. S. A. and Canada only.

FROM A U. S. LIBERATOR B-24 BOMBER DURING RAID, THE TROPICAL ISLAND OF NAURU LOOKED LIKE THIS. SMOKE IS RISING FROM THE THREE BOMBED-OUT PHOSPHATE PLANTS

Returning to Funafuti after a raid on Nauru, a B-24 Liberator lands on palm-fringed landing strip. Funafuti is a new U. S. base recently set up by Marines in the Ellice Islands, southeast of the Gilberts. From here, Nauru is 900 miles; and the big Jap airbase at Tarawa, 700 miles.

U.S. PLANES BOMB NAURU

General Hale describes phosphate plant destruction

Recently General Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, received a letter from Major General Willis H. Hale, commanding 7th Air Force, stationed in Hawaii. The letter described a raid made April 21, by General Hale and his men on the Jap-held islands of Nauru and Tarawa in the Gilbert group. With the letter were pictures of the raid, some of which are printed here.

Wrote Hale, "I first proceeded on April 18 to the island of Funafuti. On April 20 I took off at night with 22 B-24's overloaded, each carrying approximately 4,000 lb. of various type bombs. Our targets on Nauru had been well photographed prior to arrival. We were lucky in that the weather was perfect, although it permitted the enemy to see our approach. The first elements were engaged by enemy Zero fighters and all of us received heavy antiaircraft fire. Most of our planes were damaged, and three officers and nine enlisted men were wounded. One officer is in serious condition—shot in the stomach.

"As you will see from the attached photographs, this mission was successful beyond my greatest hopes. I am positive that it will be many months before the Japs can restore their destroyed machinery, which was involved in the refining of phosphates. Prior to the war Nauru produced 8% of the world's phosphate supply and, as far as I know, there are no other refineries now available to the Japs except in the Caroline group. Our bombing was all done below 8,500 feet. All planes returned to Funafuti.

"Next day the Japs came down from Tarawa and attacked me twice on the ground at Funafuti. They were lucky in securing direct hits on two of my bombers. Several officers and men were killed or wounded.

"The following day we took off again at night, and flew directly west on Tarawa. Our bombs were seen to fall among their planes in the revetment area."

Direct hit is scored on one of the three big Jap phosphate refining plants on Nauru. This island produces 80% of all Japan's phosphate, which is used not only for fertilizer but for smoke and incendiary bombs, for drugs, plastics and rustproof metals.

Rudder of a Liberator was shot away during air battle. Here it is examined by crew members. Other planes had flat tires, perforated tanks, punctured hydraulic systems.

A Liberator burns up after the Jap attack on Funafuti, about 4 a. m. on the morning after the big American raid on Nauru. Another destroyed U. S. Liberator is at left.

Courage THAT GOES DEEP

Pig Boats? Not OUR Subs, Brother!

The new U. S. Submarines, built by your War Bonds, are different as day and night from the cramped "pig boats" of the last war. Amazingly modernized, our subs are now air-conditioned throughout and so clean you can "eat off the floor." Shower baths, individual bunks for every man, a fine galley serving excellent food, 50% higher pay — all contribute greatly to health, efficiency and morale.

BUY WAR BONDS

WHAT Prime Minister Churchill said of the heroic R.A.F. after the Battle of Britain, America can now say of its submarine sailors in the Battle of the Pacific: "Never . . . was so much owed by so many to so few."

With less than 1% of our Navy's personnel, U. S. Submarines have accounted for 40% of all Jap ships sunk or smashed in the war!

This phenomenal share of total Japanese losses, credited exclusively to our submarines, has made millions realize how much we at home owe to these silent sentinels of our security. Each new report of thrilling adventure and devastating destruction, carried out with cool courage right under the noses of the Nipponese, explains more clearly why the United States Navy considers its "submariners" the pride of the fleet.

Naturally, our company and its workers find satisfaction in every dramatic deed accomplished by the submarines we build. But the real credit goes to the valiant, but word-shy, officers and men who take them to sea.

Wounded Americans are prepared for air evacuation to the nearest hospital. Some of them were wounded in U. S. attack on Nauru, others by Jap attack on Funafuti.

At Hickam Field, Hawaii, a month later, more than 300 officers and men who participated in raids were decorated. It was one of war's longest offensive air operations.

NATURE'S CAMOUFLAGE

Sirs:

To all outward appearances this palm frond (top picture) on the lawn of the Pasadena Chapter, American Red Cross Production Center, where hundreds of workers pass daily, had no significance. The accompanying photographs prove a different story, however.

By chance the photographer's foot happened to dislodge the frond, thus revealing a nesting California valley quail which had tunneled under the fallen frond to build her nest.

Disturbed by the photographer's investigation of her hide-out, the quail temporarily abandoned her nest. Uncovered was a full setting of 15 eggs. Nature students say this is one of the most unusual nests ever brought to their attention.

Bringing in the HARVEST

...SO VITAL TO VICTORY!

NEVER before in history has food figured so much in American calculations.

Today we are a rationed nation, sharing our food with our boys abroad and their comrades-in-arms.

In order that there may be food for all, the railroads not only are moving great quantities from canneries, packing plants, fruit and vegetable areas but are sending thousands of cars into the harvest fields to haul millions of bushels of grain—your daily bread. You may wonder how the railroads can take on so big a job as the harvest these days and still keep the war effort rolling. Here is the answer in one word—cooperation.

The railroads work together. While crops are still ripening in the fields, their plans are already laid. When harvesting starts, Pennsylvania Railroad contributes a share of its freight cars, along with other railroads, to the great American car "pool"...and there's a reserve army of cars all mobilized to move the crops to elevators and ship sidings.

Result: Plenty of cars for agriculture, the load evenly distributed among many railroads.

It is this sort of teamwork, going on every day, that is enabling the railroads to do for their country what United States Senator Clyde M. Reed of Kansas described as "the most phenomenal job in their history."

The rest-pause that refreshes

*Welcome in peace...
more welcome in war work*

MANAGERS and personnel directors will tell you that regular rest-pauses plus the refreshment of ice-cold Coca-Cola increase contentment in their plants. Thus production is increased. A pause for Coca-Cola is a little thing in itself, but it's one of those little things that brightens a busy day.

You might think it strange that workers have such a welcome for a 5¢ soft drink. But Coca-Cola has something all its own in goodness. Made with a finished art, it has taste that always pleases. And more than just quenching thirst, it brings a happy after-sense of complete refreshment. The only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself.

Letters from plant managers from coast to coast emphasize that the little moment for an ice-cold Coca-Cola means a lot to workers in war plants. It's a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things... a way to turn to refreshment without turning from work.

A breathing spell, a rest-pause and ice-cold Coca-Cola. Contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

Hard work, rush work, hot work. Wouldn't you, yourself, welcome a frosty bottle of Coca-Cola when it came your time to pause? Who wouldn't.

The best
5¢
is always the better buy!
